The City had been hoping that it would fall back below 5 and the news added to the gloom after this week's poor industrial production figures and the unexpectedly sharp surge in Government borrowing last month.

Retail prices in April were 1.3 per cent up compared with the previous month. The Budget measures worked through to prices more quickly than usual. However, the Government remains confident that its forecast of 4.5 per cent inflation by the end of the year will still-be met Page 21

Shore fury turned on both sides in pit strike

By Authory Bevins, Political Correspondent

senior spokesman on trade and industry, yesterday aggravated Opposition divisions over the miners' dispute with a direct attack on what he called the stubborn refusal of Mr Arthur Scargill and Mr Ian MacGregor to make any compromise.

He told an industrial conference in Scarborough that claims had been distorted and exaggerated by both sides in the dispute, and that the failure to order a ballot had proved a disaster for miners' unity.

Because of that, "frustration, bitterness, and anger have swept coalfields", he said. "And on top of this, we have had now for weeks on end a display of total intransigence by the parties

The madness had to be ended, Mr Shore said, with talks free of preconditions imposed

The speech directly crossed the public views of Mr Neil Kinnock, the party leader, who told a Labour conference in Tenby: "At present, any room for negotiation by the National Coal Board is blocked by the orders and the conditions of the Government.

"The miners, meanwhile, cannot seriously accept an agenda of huge job losses, the collapse of communities, and the closure of workable pits."

Labour's problems were aggravated by a Commons motion, tabled by Mr Dennis Skinner, Mr Tony Benn, and other members of the left-wing Campaign Group of MPs, which said in terms of a censure motion: "That this House fully supports the National Union of Mineworkers in their campaign against pit closures; and has no confidence in her Majesty's Government."

Mr Skinner has been demanding for weeks that Mr. Kinnock should force a debate on such a censure motion, but Mr Kinnock has prevaricated.

The only common theme in the Labour Party is the demand for government intervention and despite reports to the contrary, senior ministers are united in their repudiation of any such notion. The cabinet indeed appears content to let the Labour Party stew.

Mr Arthur Scargill, president of the National Union of Mineworkers (NUM), is due to Mr Scargill will be ac-companied by Mr Peter Heath-field, general secretary, in what will be an important attempt at nightening the noose" around British industry.

They will be urging the foreign unions to put pressure on their governments to stop shipping coal directly or indirectly to Britain.

Meanwhile, an attempt to break the deadlock by Mr Stanley Orme, Labour's energy man, who is due to meet Mr MacGregor, the coal board chairman, on Tuesday, encountered scepticism from pitmen's leaders. They would not "negotiate their members out of jobs", said Mr Terry Thomas, of the South Wales NUM.

The Conservatives yesterday rushed through the writ for the Portsmonth South by-election to take place on June 14. European Assembly polling day, in the evident bope of squeezing the Social Democrats. One senior party source said that the hurry could be explained partly by the wish to get any political unpleasantness over with a reference to the SDP threat.

The by-election has been caused by the death of Mr Ralph Bonner-Pink on May 6. At the last election, he won the seat with a majority of 12,335 votes over the SDP, Labour came a close third.

About 20 Conservative hopefuls will be put through selection procedure this weekend in time for adoption of a candidate on Tuesday.

Labour has selected Mrs Sally Thomas, aged 37, a teacher, who contested the seat at the last election. The Social Democrats conclude a ballot for their candidate next Wednesday.

Mrs Shirley Williams, the SDP president, said vesterday that the rush to the polls showed that the last thing the government wanted was a detailed discussion of its poli-cies. It was evidence of "the cies. It was evidence of cootempt with which this coolempt with which this government treats the British people" its "growing alarm" at the SDP challenge.

COMMONS

The Animal Health and Welfare Bill reflected areas of concern, such as the control of animal disease, the control of animal disease, welfare of poultry in slaughterhouses, artificial methods of livestock breeding and veterinary medicines, Mrs Peggy Fenser, Parliamentary Secretary, Department of Agriculture, said in the Commons wheo moving the second reading.

It would extend powers for seizing material to prevent the spread of disease, particularly to cover the increasing use and movement of animal semen, mbryos and nva.

There would be increased powers of entry for vets to farms and other premises to help stop the spread of

Orders to protect animals in transit would be extended to cover ourneys in or over territorial valers.

Slaughter of poultry would be more strictly controlled and poultry slaughterers would be licensed as io the red meat industry.

Codes of practice to ensure the humane treatment of birds io slaughterhouses would be issued, although they would not be directly enforceable in law.

She said that, because of increased production, quail would be added to the list of poultry to be covered by the new laws.

tabling an amendment to provide for the properly qualified super-vision in poultry slaughterhouses for all welfare matters. The official veterinary surgeon was oot always required in poultry slaughterhouses and this problem would be considered in depth with the interests directly involved.

Mrs Fenner said oew regulations would control artificial breeding techniques, such as embryo recovery and transfer in cattle and cloning, because of the possibility of the spread of animal disease and the use of poor quality donors.

Previous Acts would be repealed and formally end controls on natural breeding, such as the licensing of bulls and stallions. The production and supply of veterinary medicines would be coorrolled, as well as human medicines, and the medicated feeds sector would be brought under stricter control. She said cost and any increase in public service manpower to enforce the oew laws should be minimal.

Mr Robin Corbett (Birmingham, Erdington, Lah), for the Opposition, said the debate took place against a background of sustained public concern about the way the many species of animals farmed for food or clothing were farmed.

majority not only loved their stock but were determined to make sure that it was better than their neighbours'. Mr Andrew Hunter (Basingstoke, C) said he welcomed the Bill but he was concerned about the licensing of the slaughterer of poultry.

If on a small scale poultry farm the slaughterer was unable through accident or iliness or work there could be enormous problems while someone else obtained a licence. Alternatively the welfare of the birds might, suffer when oew arrangements were made rapidly for off-farm slaughtering.

It would be better if the licensed person could in some circumstances delegate the act of slaughter while retaining responsibility. The Bill was read a second time.

New guide on cancer screening

By Nicholas Timmins Social Services Correspondent

New guidelines on screening women for cervical cancer were given a cautious welcome by doctors yesterday who never-theless said that they did not go far enough. Deaths from cervical cancer, at over 2,000 a year, are rising and specialists said that, ideally, women should be screened every three years, rather than the five the Department of Health is recommending in draft guid-ance. But limitation of health service facilities for screening made that a "counsel of perfection", they said. The new guidance, however, is likely to lead to claims by family doctors leaders for extra fees for the five-yearly tests for all sexually active women. Under the guidance, screen-

Mr Neil McIntosh. director of Shelter, said they were aware that county councils in Dorset, Hertfordshire, Hereford and Worcester, Surrey and Cornwall had taken such action and believed others were considering it.

tenaocies cover the whole field of county council activity, including education, social services, police and fire. In his swift response to the reports, Mr Gow said that there might be cases where a county council needed to retain control of housing for its operational purposes. But he added: "I regarded it as particularly indefensible if any tenant were to be evicted from a dwelling which is surplus to operational requirements simply so that that dwelling might be sold on the open market with vacant possession at a higher price."

The Association of County Councils said that it was not opposed in principle to the extension of security of tenure and the right to buy if provision could be made for county councils to retain an adequate stock of houses.

"As an association we have not offered advice, and our impression is that our member counties have been acting to safeguard their operational needs rather than to thwart the Government's legislation", a spokesman said. He added that all tenants would be offered alternative accommodation.

Hongkong negotiations

Eight-year delay feared for new constitution By Henry Stachope, Diplomatic Correspondent.

Hongkong people might have to wait up to eight years before seeing the full constitution which will come into force under Chinese rule after 1997. That is the estimate of the time it could take China to

Barring any settlement, vir-tually all West German car production is expected to be halted by next week in the country's worst bout of industrial unrest since 1978.

The atmosphere was further soured yesterday when the independent Federal Labour Institute ruled that workers laid off outside the strike areas were not entitled to Government unemployment payments.

Herr Hans Mayr, IG Metall's chairman alleged that the Government and employers had succeeded in engaging the neutral institute in the battle against the unions. Trade union leaders had said they expected workers to receive government money if they were laid off through no fault of their own. But the insuture ruled that, as

How a court ruling shaped the future of US blacks

From Trevor Fishlock New York

Thirty years ago this week, the United States Supreme Court announced its most revolutionary decision. In the case of an 11-year-old school-girl, it made a ruling that became the fulcrum of profound social change. The effects of this judgment, tumultuous and controversial, continue to shape the American experience.

The nine justices decided unanimously in the case of Brown v Topeka Board of Education that racial segregation in schools, a pillar of white supremacy, was unconsti-The plaintiff in the historic case was Linda Brown, a black girl who had been forced by the education board in Topeka, Kansas, to attend an exclusively negro school. The action was brought in her name by the National Association for the Advancement of Coloured People (NAACP), formed 44 years before to fight for the true emancipation of the most oppressed Americans.

The Linda Brown decision

The Linda Brown decision set the stage for far-reaching and agonizing struggle. It was both reproach and repudiation. Growing conflict in the Gulf

Iran sends appeal to UN chief

From Zoriana Pysariwsky New York

Iran yesterday countered efforts by ministers of the Gulf Cooperation Council to take the issue of Iranian air attacks on oil tankers to the UN Security Council. It called for urgent measures against Iraq's determination to reduce Iran's oil exports with attacks of its own.

In a letter to Senor Javier Pérez de Cuéllar, the UN Secretary-General, Mr Ali Akbar Velayati, the Iranian Foreign Minister, said Iraq had in recent months resorted to attacking vessels in a desperate attempt to internationalize the Gulf war. It was the duty of the international community to contain this dangerous new Iraqi adventure, he added.

Señor Pérez de Cuéllar has already offered to mediate but UN sources said he had no specific ideas on how to deal with the latest developments.

The Security Council is Inclined to favour Iraq, much to the irritation of Iran, which claims that it is a victim of aggression.

Israelis kill escaper from camp in Lebanon

From Christopher Walker Jerusalem

Israeli security forces have shot and killed an Arab prisoner who was one of a group of 10 who attempted to break out from Ansar, the heavily guarded hillside detention camp in occupied southern Lebanon, on Thursday night.

Thursday night.
According to a terse official communique released yesterday by Israel's military command, the prisoner died from his wounds after being rushed to hospital in northern Israel. Four of the other escapees were recaptured hut early last night five were still at large despite a large-scale Israeli security operation in the area north-west of the former Crusader port of

Earlier the Israelis had denied that their soldiers were respon-sible for the deaths of two Arab women whose shooting in the Ein Hilwe Palestinian refugee camp on Thursday came during serious disturbances there which have provoked the Arab group at the United Nations to all for a meeting of the Security Council.

After three days of unrest

inside the sprawling camp near the centre of the port city of Sidon, which now houses more than 24,000 Palestinians, most of them living in homes rebuilt from the rubble caused by the 1982 Israeli bombardment, Irael's Army spokesman re-leased a detailed communique outlining the Israeli version of

At the same time officials disclosed that information about events in the camp during and after the big Israeli search on Tuesday night have been sent to the US Government.

The move was seen as evidence that Israeli ministers are concerned at what they regard as intenational over-reaction, based largely on exaggerated versions of events in Ein Hilwe put out by the Beirut-based media.

According to the Israelis two camp residents were injured by Israeil soldiers on Tuesday

Israelis fire on parked cars

Israeli forces in southern Lebanon fired on cars in Sidon yesterday, bursting the tyres of at least 20 vehicles, and kicked and hit a lorry driver in their campaign to prevent parking (Our Beirnt Correspondent writes). They also rammed the lorry with an armoured vehicle and fired shots into the door when it was not moved quickly. The Israelis aim to reduce the possibility of car bombs and other roadside attacks on their night, including one woman who was taken to hospital. The Army elaimed that the operation had uncovered a large arsenal of weaponry which included 25 kg of explosive, 40 hand grenades, detonators, antivehicle mines, rifles, sub-machine guns and flamethrowers.

The Israelis said that the first woman killed on May 17 was shot by a man attempting to evacuate his family from the camp after their house had been bombed "during a settling of accounts among local residents", and that the second woman was killed a few hours later when shots were fired within the crowd attending the funeral of the first Palestinian killed. A local man was also wounded

Although the communique did not refer to the subject, it is believed that some of those involved in the violence may have been Palestinians armed by Israel as part of its efforts throughout sonthern Lebanon to huild up local militias prepared to resist the return of radical Palestinian elements. This move by Israel has only added to the confusion surrounding the loyalties of the various armed groups in southern Lebanon.

Law Report May 19 1984

Taking evidence at split hearings

Ramsay and Mr P. Smith Hudgment delivered May 141 When industrial tribunals in unfair dismissal cases heard issues of fairness at one hearing and questions involving compensation and contributory fault at a and contributory fault at a subsequent hearing, some direction as to how the evidence on the two issues was to be dealt with was The employers, Iggesund Converters Ltd, appealed from a decision of a Bedford industrial tribunal in February 1983 who awarded the employee, Mr Gwynfor Lewis. compensation of £3,500. They appealed on the ground that the tribunal had erred in law in refusing to allow them to call a vitness at the compensation hearing who had not testified at the first hearing on liability, to give evidence establishing contributory fault which might have reduced the amount of compensation.

Mr A. Ullstein for the employers, Mr H. Bennett for the employee.

MR JUSTICE WAITE said that the split bearing had found favour with many industrial tribunals as both serving administrative con-venience and affording the parties an opportunity of coming to terms on remedy once the issue of fairness

At the first hearing the employers were held to have been unfair in dismissing an employee on inadequate evidence of misconduct.

At the second hearing on compensation the employers apphed for leave to call a witness who had not testified at the first hearing. to prove the same alleged misconduct by the employee to establish

They relied on differences of purpose between a hearing in which the only issue was the fairness of the employers' attitude 10 suspected misconduct and a hearing in which the issue of contributory fault turned wholly upon the events which actually occurred, regardless of whether the employers were aware of them at the time or not.

The industrial tribunal rejected application to adduce further evidence at the second hearing on the ground that the witness should have been called at the main hearing. The tribunal went on to find that there had been no contributory fault.

The Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978 and the industrial tribunals' rules of procedure were silent on questions as to whether the employer was required to allege contributory fault at all or simply leave it to be taken up by the tribunal of its own volition; how the relevant allegations were to be tried; when the employer was permitted toIndustrial tribunals had developed different procedures in dealing with contributory fault. One way was to maintain a "wait and see" policy leaving the employer to raise the issue if and when he More usually they would give directions at the outset to enable any question of contributory fault to be considered in a manner designed to give the employer a proper opportunity of developing it and the employee a sufficient opportunity of The chairman could direct whether there was to be one composite hearing at which all issues were dealt with or whether it should be split into separate hearings as to fairness and remedy. If a composite hearing was directed an employer had to ensure that he adduced all the evidence and argument on which he would rely both on issues of fairness and contributory fault.

Where a split hearing was chosen an evidential direction should be given, either that although any question of contributory fault was to be dealt with at a separate hearing, the evidence on the issues of fairness and contributory fault were to be taken together, or, that the evidence was to be treated as divided into separate categories and evidence exclusively relevant to compensation would be taken separately at the second hearing on stemmed from the fact that the industrial tribunal had omitted to give any evidential direction at all thereby leaving both parties in a state of uncertainty as to whether and at what stage the employer would be permitted to make out a case for contributory fault on the part of the employee.

In the present case, although the particular witness had not been called at the first hearing, the employers had devoted a sign part of their evidence to what had actually occurred and it must have been clear to the industrial tribunal that the employers were alleging gross misconduct.

Any unfairness suffered by the employers as a result of being denied the opportunity of calling a witness at the second hearing was outweighed by the greater unfairness to the employee of exposing him to the same charge twice over. The industrial tribunal's decision to exclude the evidence was justifiable. and the appeal would be dismissed.

Sheridan Morley meets Stephen Sondheim on the eve of his televised 'master class'

Stage coach with a difference

Stephen Sondheim: "I'll always have a limited audiênce

For the ever-increasing hand who believe that Stephen Sondheim is far and away the best thing to have happened to the stage musical in the second half of this century, the good news is that he has just given his first master class, and the better news is that highlights from his five-hour session can be seen on London Weekend Television tomorrow night.

The idea for the class came in fact from Alan Benson and Melvyn Bragg at The South Bank Show, and it arose from an earlier documentary they had made about Sondheim at the time of his classic if commercially ill-fated Sweeney Todd.

On this occasion, they suggested, it might be intriguing to film Sondheim coaching a class of actors and singers from the Guildhall School of Music and Drama where his Merrily We Roll Along had been given an acclaimed London première last year. To those of us lucky enough to be at the class last week (one that Sondheim conducted on a flying visit between recording sessions of his latest Broadway musicall it was an education in the technique of show singing; more surprisingly, it was also ondheim's debut as a teacher. "I'd never taught a class in my life.

but I'd seen Pavarotti and Menuhin working with students on American television, and I was keen to find out what the Guildhall people were really like, so I agreed. The idea was to try to give some insights into song-writing. but I was very keen to work with people who wanted to be actors as well as singers, because I'm not all that interested in purely vocal techniques." Leaving Benson and Bragg to cut the five hours of that master class down to usual South Bank Show proportions, Sondheim returns to Broadway and a very similar problem: the cutting of his latest score down to two sides of an LP. Sunday in the Park With George, which opened in New York to Sondheim's customary mixed press but a heartwarming total of 10 Tony nominations, is perhaps his most courageous show yet - a stunning celebration of Seural's painting La Grande Jane which brings each of its occupants to life, tells their stories and ahead to consider the problems of the pointillist painter in a world where art is just another division of hig husiness. "A couple of years ago I got together with James Lapine, a photographer who'd backed into playwriting, and we began to talk about possible ideas for shows and then one day he brought along this painting and we realized that it was a stage set with only the artist missing, so we began to work on telling the story. I was keen at the time to get away from Broadway, because it seemed to me there was such a climate of critical hostility to the kind of work I was doing that Merrily We Roll Along got verbally desiroyed even during the previews. So we went off-Broadway to a playwright's workshop with this one, only then of course to be accused of arrogance and 'turning our backs' on Broadway. You can't win, We simply knew that we had an experimental piece that would baffle a lot of people, as my work always does, and we wanted to see how it worked. Then of course we discovered that, though it did work, no off-Broadway house could afford to finance a cast of 17 plus orchestra, so here we are now back on Broadway again. But we're in a small theatre, and I think we do now have a real chance of survival."

Which is no small miracle, when you consider that most of the rest of Broadway is now fast turning itself into Las Vegas East, with a lot of feathers and glitter to reassure customers that at fifty dollars a ticket, even if they hate it they can see where their money has gone. In a world where classical heights are reckoned to bave been atormed by Dustin Hoffman shuffling around in a lacklustre Death of a Splesman, and where the musical theatre at its commercial best is reckoned to be a sanitized singalong of Cage aux folles, what hope does Sondbeim see for himself in the future of Broadway?

"Well, I'll always have a limited audience: I've been waiting now for 20 years for that to change and I begin to think it never will. Some people, some crities, have never understood my work and they aren't about to start trying

There is, of course, one other alternative for Sondheim: Sweeney Todd is about to have its first production in Texas and then joins the autumn repertoire of the New York City Opera:

"People keep telling me that should be my real home, but the trouble is that I find most operas very boring. I believe in the apparent effortlessness of musical comedy, where singers don't make you aware all the time of the strain on their vocal chords."

Cannes Film Festival

Yesterday the Cannes Festival presented the world premiere of Jerzy Skolimowski's Success is the Best Revenge, two years after Skolimowski won the Chichester directing prize here with another tragi-comedy of the life of called poles in Britain. Moon-

His new film is self-evidently autobiographical in spirit if not in detail. The hero (Michael York) is a brilliant Polish theatre director. His family is played by Skolimowski's own wife and sons under the names of Joanna Szczerbic, Michael Lyndon and George Skolimowski. Even the house they live in is Skolimowski's own Kensington home.

The hero may get great notices and the Legion d'Hon-neur, but he is no bero to his family or his bank manager, despite his ingenuity in getting hits of his stage productions to fall off the back of the lorry for home improvements. The comic chaos that results from the elashes of this incorrigible Pole with his adopted land has its more serious aspect in a conflict with his frustrated and resentful elder son, a conflict which resolves itself into an opposition of attitudes to their Polish beritage.

Like Moonlighting the film was made at great speed. But again, thanks to Skolimowski's phenomenal dexterity, that speed is betrayed only in the film's vitality and topicality -. even the coal strike features in it. Full of Skolimowski's charac-teristic comie visual asides, Success is the Best Revenge is a brilliant, energizing exercise that should do well for Britain in the Cannes awards. The venerable 78-year-old John Huston has also scored a success in Cannes with his fullblooded adaptation of Malcolm Lowry's novel Under the Volcano, which has till now defeated generations of wouldbe adaptors.

Huston sees the film as "an account of a hreak-down in values which force the reader or audience to admire the eourage with which a man destroys himself". Huston's solution to the problems of realizing Lowry's nightmare imagery eentres on the performance of Albert Finney as the British expatriate. an alcoholic minor diplomat making the ultimate battles with alcohol and despair in Mexico in 1938.

The production of ancient tragedy on the modern stage is a range-finding exercise, primarily concerned with establishing an appropriate distance between the speciator and the work; and the English stage has lately been taking this process to extremes.

John Barton's The Greeks, heavily rewritten with open references to modern terrorism. trucked in for a point-blank close-up: Peter Half's Orestela withdrew and presented a remote world of masked beroes closer to Beowulf than to the Baader-Meinhofgang.

Neither approach succeeded in wrenching open the impregnable attic treasure chest and I am more in sympathy with the modest third approach proposed in this studio production by Peter Gill and John Burgess. The other four programmes in this series to date have been in some respects more conventional in subject-matter, but the technique of montage documentary - no narrative, just sequences of actuality and informal interview carefully balanced and linked - is in fact ideal for the subjects their makers have chosen. The Society of Authors celebrates its centenary next week amid growing militancy among its members. Michael Holroyd (left) records the early aggression of Bernard Shaw, who joined in 1897

summer of 1884 reports began to appear in newspapers formation of a society "for the Prevention of Cruelty to Anthors." The Times was warmly approving. "If authors can agree and teach one another to do what is best for themselves", it commented, "they will be doing what is best for the community at large".

In spite of its incendiary history of rows, the Society of Authors has become by its centenary year the recognized spokesman, as well as an advice and information centre, for writers of books. lts first president was Tennyson:

hut the most active member during the early years of this century was Bernard Shaw. Shaw's attitude to the book trade when he jnined the society in 1897 at the age of 41 was already well-formed and from the author's point of view, impeccable. "I object to publishers", he had once written to a bookseller. "The one service they have done me is to teach me to do without them."
Nevertheless he joined the society because he had decided that year to put his plays into print.

Grant Richards, hlatantly moo-ocled and with a taste for Monte Carlo, was the sort of bohemian gambler whn appealed to Shaw.
"You are the most incompetent publisher I ever heard of", he congratulated him. Richards responded: "You are just about as husinesslike a man as I ever met in my short life".

Shaw drafted a five-year agreement, for publication of Plays Pleasant and Unpleasant, insisted on a certificate of compliance with the Fair Wages Clause, issued injuctions on spelling, punctuation and margins, threatened proof corrections on the scale of Balzac, let it be known that a single misprint upset him more than the deaths of his father and sister and intoxicated himself by playing the man of business.

In articles for The Author, Shaw paid it the compliment of treating it as a serious husiness paper for manual labourers. Providing facts, figures, and recommendations, he preserved readability, was extraordinarily skilful at placing his statistics in a human context and, whenever possible, conjured entertainment from them.

He celebrated the beauties of phonetic spelling and simplified punctuation, and uttered a heartrending appeal to his fellow writers on behalf of the wooderful economies of a 42-letter alphabet.

Eighty years ago bookselling was as ridiculously underdone io Britain as it is now. "If you turn to the ber of places where you can buy books with the number of places where you can buy boots". Shaw wrote in the summer of 1904, "you will arrive at the conclusion that the average man wears out over 50 pairs of boots whilst he is reading a single book." Most writers naturally reviled their publishers for "the anathetic desperation with which they offer at a slight advance on wastepaper prices - and sometimes offer in vain - 'remainders' of editions which could easily be sold at full price if there were any real book market in the country." But since there were so few real booksellers what were publishers to do? Shaw positively had no answer: he had a question.

Once his agreement with Grant Richards had come to an end, Shaw eonsulted the Society over Man and Superman. In 1903 he published this book himself under an agreement with Constable which became his eommissioned distributor. "I don't want a compulsory partner for life". Shaw explained in The Author, "I don't want a patron. I don't want an amateur collaborator. I don't want a moralist". All he asked for was "an agreement drafted by myself" and, on the royalty system, "a modest 20 per cent or so".

In Shaw's ideal world there would have been no law of copyright, no advances or retreats, no giving and receiving of royalties. The prestige of literature should be the husiness of the state. All authors would be paid equal incomes, and all other professions would be paid the same as authors.

Pending this millennium of nationalization and equality, authors were of necessity capitalists. literature was a sweated trade and publishing a gamble.

In such circumstances there was oo questioo of equitable profit and fair dealing. The rule of the publishing game was that each side used what advantages it had. That, Shaw argued, was one of the reasons for the existence of the Society of Authors. That was why he rec-ommended all writers, humble and exalted, to join the Society. Traditionally theirs had been an occupation for geotlemen (certainly not ladies) and this had made them shamefully deficient in social con-

"Without union and collective action we are helpless. When we begin working, we are so poor and so busy that we have neither the time nor the means to defend ourselves against the commercial organizations which exploit us. When we become famous, we become famous suddenly, passing at one bound from the state in which we are . . . too poor to fight our own battles, to a state in which our time is so valuable that it is not on lawsuits and bad dehts. We all. eminent and obscure alike, need the Authors' Society.'

annual dinner in the summer of 1906. In February the previous year he had been elected to the committee of management and early in 1906 joined the dramatic subcommittee. He believed that literature, being an artistic and learned profession, had to be relentlessly defended against the philistine presumption that, like all fine art, it was an immoral luxury which in nimes of war or recession must give way to the most trivial political considerations. In Shaw's philosnphy the literature of a country created its mind since each country largely took its ideas from what it read. He saw this "creation of mind" as the great function of authorship, giving it dignity, and its prac-titioners courage and self-respect.

Shaw discovered in his commitment to the Society of Authors something of what other men looked for in romance, and his work nn its committees was equivalent to other men's social life. What he looked for within the society was a great corporate conscinusness. What he found often disappointed him. Most authors did oot have "brains enough to understand their legal and economic position, nor character enough to take care of their own interests." Shaw's exasperation with such "oerveless and spineless blacklegs" streogthened his belief in the Society of Authors itself.

"Nothing will save the majority of authors from themselves," declared, "except a ruthlessly tyrannical Professional Association having oo other interest than to keep up the market to its highest practical possibilities . . . It is pitiable to see a body of professional men on whom the Copyright Acts have conferred a monopoly of enormous value unable to do for themselves what is done by porters and colliers and trade-unionists generally."

Though Shaw believed that unionism was most practicable in trades, where the members worked together in large bodies, lived in the same neighbourhoods and belonged to the same social class, he thought the Society should be careful how it disclaimed the idea of being unionized. He looked at unions as conspiracies against the public interest that would become unacted meanwhile as the debit side of the capitalist account. Over those matters, such as the model treaty with West End managers and the liberalization of the censorship laws, almost nothing appeared to have been achieved during his 10 years of service. Shaw's frustration made him doubt eventually the validity of unrefined democracy. So much, in the interests of getting things done, had been suppressed: and so little had been accomplished.

In this process of suppression, actions seemed to be dissolved into words which also became Shaw's coin of emotion. He felt impotent when his words were proscribed by the Lord Chamberlain and could not reach the public. Mrs Warren's Profession was banned for almost 30 years! So when, after a good deal of agitation, a joint select committee was established by Parliament in 1909 to re-examine censorship. Shaw's words streamed out everywhere, and he spent himself exorbitantly. From all his ferment of energy no legislation was born. Over the internal politics of the society Shaw was more successful. Keeping together, he believed, was good husiness. He spent much time preventing members from quarrelling, insulting, and coming to hlows; All this changed with the First World War. Shaw's manifesto Common Sense About the War aroused greater hatred than anything nf its kind since Tom Paine's The Rights of Man. Many authors, in the grip of war fever, refused to speak to him. The criuc J. C. Squire demanded in the press that he be tarred and feathered; the best-selling West Indian novelist W. J. Loeke suddenly stood up and screamed: " will oot sit in the room with Bernard Shaw"; the playwright Henry Arthur Jones published an opeo letter calling him a "freakish homunculus.

germinated outside of lawful procreation." Shaw had finally united the Society, but against himself. To prevent it changing from a pro-fessional into a political body, he resigned in 1915 from the two committees.

There is no resentment or bitterness in what he wrote at 'the time. But in his fashion he had been affected and the feeling remained or the remaining 35 years of his life Shaw was one of the society's most active non-committee members. Herbert Thring, a solicitor who was the society's secretary until 1930, seldom acted in any important matter without first finding out Shaw's views. Shaw sometimes spoke at the society's annual meetings, hut generally preferred to exercise his influence from a distance. "It is a mistake to meet authors", he concluded. All that is tolerable in them is their books". In 1931 he became a foundation member of the League on Dramatists which the society started to deal exclusively with the interests on its playwright members. Shaw's husiness maxims continued to appear in The Author, conselling writers not to have lunch with their publishers, or to avoid the wretched pedantry of peppering their pages with the uncouth bacilli" of apostrophes.

Shaw's last contribution to The Author appeared in the summer of 1945, his ninetieth year. It was an unsentimental recollection and showed that the wounds he had concealed so long had never healed. Of his 60 years in husiness as an author, the 10 he had spent working nn the society's committees might have been passed at the top of Everest for all the good they had done. He did not blame the society hut blamed the unchanging factor of the author himself, "socially untrained by his irresponsible solitude and spoilt equally by success or failure. [he is] an incorrigible individualist anarchist, loathing business and its discipline and hating and dreading the few colleagues who knnw better and drudge at the task of protecting and nrganizing him," he ended his final paragraph. "I had 10 years of it; and de plume and an accent, preferably gutteral Germanic, audiences would sit mesmerized by my every utterance. The late Dr Jacob Bronowski's career was entirely built around this British cult of the foreign professor. Millions sat glued to their television sets listening to material which, if delivered by one of their countrymen, they would have instantly switched off.

This is not meant in any way to deny brilliance or contribution. Indeed we would be greatly the poorer without them. It is merely a eomment upon a curious attitude which we have that evokes untold reverence for exiled intellectuals or those whose advent barely goes back more than a generation. It is a pantheon which gathers to itself such stars in the cerebral firmament as George Steiner, Sir Isaiah Berlin, Sir Ernst Gombrich, Lord Kaldor or Lord Weidenfeld. But it is also an attitude which belongs to a wider context. comment upon a curious attitude

When I was at school in the 1950s it was certainly ground into me that British painting was on the whole foreign: Holbein, Van Dyck and Kneller covered the period down to about 1700 after which, apart from Hogarth, Constable and Turner there wasn't much to compete with the statement that all painting was French. The same was true of sculpture, running from Rysbrack and Rnuhiliac down to, yes, Jacoh Epstein. Equally it was applied to music, defined wholly in terms of Handel and Mendelsohn and the visits of Mozart and Haydn to England. And all opera was Italian.

So too was this true of the ballet. That was Russian or, at a pinch, French. The result of this insular fixation was that the pioneers of our ballet had to change their names to be taken seriously at all: Ninette de Valois, Marie Rambert, Anton Dolin, Markova and Fonteyn, It must have been a brave decision at that period to have hung onto names as ordinary as Harold Turner and Mona Inglesby.

All fashion was French. So were all hairdressers, with salons labelled Maison or Madame X. Food and restaurants were almost uniformly French and nothing has shifted French from the menu cards of the grandest tables.

It is some measure of the past 30 years that virtually all this has been reversed. The Americans discovered British art, which now occupies a

The British do not like intellectuals. Rather, let us be accurate, they do not like intellectuals who fail to conceal that they are. The exception, of course, is those who have a foreign name. I have always thought that my life would have been completely different if my surname bad been Strongski. With that nom de niume and an accent, preferably stored our musical mythology. Even British cooks and menus in English are now making headway.

A rose by any other name...? It is not quite as simple as that. We stand at the end of centuries of fixed preconceptions Up until the past few decades we have never thought in terms of intellectual or cultural "empire" as the Italians, and above all the French always have. Horace Walpole summed up our viewpoint neatly in the eighteenth century when he wrote in respect of the arts: This country, which does not always err in vaunting its own productions". In fact the rediscovery Bronowski: with an English name, who would have watched?

reclamation in the present runs exactly parallel with our loss of the empire of power. The only one left to us is the one of intellect and art sustained, above all, by English becoming a universal lingua franca. So that our reconquest of areas we used cheerfully, even disdainfully, to assign to foreigners has a deeper significance than we would at first

It is also a result of the reverse of what it was hoped would emerge from joining the EEC. The sinking of national identity into Europe, besides leading to an intensification of the cult of the crown, has led us to focus with fervency on what we can identify as uniquely ours. For the first time in our history we stand at the centre of a cultural empire. But it is basically one of the arts, for these we have learnt to respect. It has yet to happen in the world of learning and of the intellect.

Give bowling a break, chaps

For those of us who believe that cricket is a game of infinite subtlety and guile, and not the rather more sophisticated form of baseball that it has lately become there was one small cause for cheer in England's recent, ill-fated tour of Pakistan.

The home team, and cricket itself, won - thanks largely to Abdul Qadir, who is a leg-break and googly bowler, a species almost as fabulous these days as the unicorn. "Leg spinners", said the England captain, Bob Willis, on a famous occasion, "don't win test matches." really? Is that right, Boh? A pity, from England's point of view, that nobody told Abdul Qadir.
Still, as a jingoist I don't normally rejoice in England's undoing, and on this occasion it was only the nature of the bowler who caused it that raised my spirits.

I even began to hope that the forthcoming series between England and the West Indies, which starts next month, might be decided, for a change, by the spinners.

Cooler consideration, however, proved that this is improbable. You only have to look at the bowling department of the West Indian squad, with its familiar complement of human catapults, to realize that the dominance of fast bowling - and probably short-pitched fast bowling at that - is most likely to continue.

What's more, for all who insist that cricket holds no more glorious sight than a good batsman facing a good spinner on a wicket lending encouragement to both, the historical perspective is even gloomier.

The last spin bowler to reach 100

wickets for England was Ray Illingworth in 1971; while the last to achieve a similar feat for West Indies was Lance Gibbs - in 1965. True, like all statistics, these conceal almost as much as they reveal. They conceal, for instance, the fact that Underwood, who had reached the 100 mark before Illingworth, proceeded to take another 190-odd, and that Gibbs went on to dismiss 309

But the fact remains that since 1971, for England, and 1965 for the West Indies, no new spin bowler has been able to establish himself in international cricket.

Of the spinners currently available to England, the most successful claimed 59 victims apiece. Along with his disgraced team-mate Emburey, still in exile for having toured South Africa with Boycott's team, Edmonds is probably the beat spin bowler in the country, but he i unlikely to be selected this summe because his skill at playing himse into the England team is surpasse only by his unique ability to tal himself out of it.

might, I suppose, hope for a recall a a bits and pieces player, especially now that he has finally managed to score a first-class century after II years of trying. But the most likely candidate for the job is Vic Marks of Somerset who, affable character and enhusiastic player that he no doubt is, never looks to me like a test match cricketer.

If England is to play a specialist spin bowler it will probably be the promising but inexperienced Nick Cook of Leicestershire, while the West Indians have the equally promising but even less experipromising, but even less exper-enced, Roger Harper. Even so, their most successful current spinner is Viv Richards and when you think of him it's not necessarily his off-break bowling that first comes to mind.

As one who recalls that in 1947 Middlesex (county champions that year, remember) took the field against Surrey with three leg-break and googly bowlers (Walter Robins, Jim Sims and Ian Bedford), opened their attack with the left-arm spinner Jack Young and won by eight wickets, I find the present state of affairs deeply depressing.

Is it simply middle-aged nostalgia that makes me think back wistfully to the days of Ramadhin and Valentine or Lock and Laker and wonder whether any of these would even get into the test team if they were playing today? I think not. Cricket without spin bowlers hunting not singly either, but in pairs - loses one of its most graceful and alluring dimensions.

And if, as I fear, such bowlers continue to be successful paragraphy continue to be generally neglected in the coming series, even the sight of Botham hitting home runs over third base off Malcohm Marshall would not be compensation enough. Sticky Wicket by Barry Norman is published on Monday by Hodder and

WHOSE PLAN FOR COAL?

Mr Stan Orme, the Shadow Energy Secretary, is to see Mr Jan MacGregor, the NCB Chairman, on Monday to explore the possibility of talks between NCB and NUM on the basis of the Plan for Coal, originally published by the Labour Government in the mid-seventies. Given the embarrassing position in which the Labour Party has found itself as a result of Mr Scargill's picketing tactics, such an initiative is understandable. It should help to present Labour with a more constructive attitude to the strike than it has been able to put forward while tagging along uncomfortably behind the Communists and the hard left, combining support for Mr Scargill with persistent criticism of the police.

Same of the second of the seco

The resurrection of the Plan for Coat is a diversion, however. It must be intended to portray this Government as in some way more severe on the miners than its Labour predecessor. That approach is of a piece with the general desire on the left to politicize the industrial situation within the coalfields. Thus the Government is repeatedly accused of a plan to "starve out" the miners, whereas it is the NUM which is forcing its members out on strike without either a ballot or strike pay. Moreover the tax payer, on whose behalf the Government is expected to act, is in fact doubly supporting the miners, both in the annual subsidy to the NCB which amounts to nearly £900 million, and in the provision of some, albeit austere, subsistence to miners' families to compensate them for the wage carner's decision to withold his labour. To work or not to work must be the individual decision of each miner. He is free to take either. though both have unpleasant consequences in the rancorous circumstances of Mr Scargill's war. The one leads to intimidation, the other to privation; but in both cases the choice lies

Because Mr Scargill has politi- through voluntary redundancy cized this dispute there is a general tendency to react to it always in political terms. If reference to the Plan for Coal can get us back to considering the purely industrial aspect of Britain's coal, so much the better. The facts show that we have moved on from the Plan for Coal of the nineteen-seventies and that, without politics, the British coal industry would now be poised for an opportunity of great productivity and expansion on the basis of good new seams and exciting technology.

The original Plan for Coal postulated capital spending of £6.5 billion whereas the figure since 1974 is actually £650 million greater. The Conservative Government has invested £3.8 hillion in coal since 1979. with approval for another £3 hillion already given. Had the productivity of 4 per cent per annum, promised in the Plan for Coal, been achieved in stead of a dismal.4.6 per cent for the whole ten year period, that investment might have been more profitable and the tax payer's hill less onerous. Will Mr Orme recognise that when he calls on Mr MacGregor? Will be also recognise that the Plan for Coal envisaged the NCB dispensing with between three and four million tons of its worst capacity each year, whereas less than half this target has been achieved so that the least productive tenth of the pits now in operation will cost £350 million this year in subsidies?

The twenty pits which are earmarked for closure collectively produce only one-third of the coal which the NCB expects to extract from two fully developed seams at Ashford and Selby. That is the measure of the productivity opportunity which awaits the coal industry once the closures have been completed with the loss of 20,000 jobs. That reduction will come entirely schemes, early retirement for the over-fifties or transfer arrangements for those miners who bave to move to new pits. Their terms are unmatched in any other part of British industry. A 55 year-old miner, for instance, receives £20,000 tax free and £75 per week until he takes his occupational pension at 65. For those under 50, whose average age is 36, redundancy entitles them to £1,000 per year's service in addition to the national redundancy terms. Miners in work have also been offered a wage rise which is greater than public sector workers in the power and gas industries and would maintain mine workers' position some 25 per cent above Britain's average industrial wage. So it is not surprising that the Coal Board this week extracted more than 700 tons of coal - the greatest in any week since the strike began - with more than 50,000 men remaining at work, again the highest figure since the start of the strike. That is the effect of Mr Scargill's attempt to achieve a strike without going through the union's normal procedures. Consequently the power stations have been able to limit the reduction of their reserves to about five per cent over the last four weeks.

There is thus much to talk about in terms of the coal industry's future which has nothing to do with politics. Since Mr Orme met Mr Scargill this week, it may be that he will be in a position on Monday to re-assure Mr MacGregor that the mineworkers' leader has privately dispensed with the idea that he can use his members as shock troops in a war to bring down the Government. Sadly that is still his publicly stated intention. As long as it remains so, the vast majority of mine-workers and their industry will be denied a future that they

with the individual.

The facts are complicated, but the issue is simple. The General Assembly has to choose one of two positions. Either a convicted murderer can never be a suitable person to serve in the ordained ministry, as a mark of the esteem in which it is held and the ahhorrence with which murder ought to be regarded. Or the Christian Gospel allows and indeed in some circumstances requires that repentance should wipe clean the moral slate, cancelling the sin and restoring the sinner to good grace. It is a fascinating but not enviable choice to have to make.

Mr Nelson was originally judged acceptable to St Andrews' Presbytery and to the central church committee charged with didates. There is a slight dispute about whether all members of the munder of his mother. On the Presbytery knew all the facts this one. The very publicity being released on licence - the the first time his case was imputes to the issue a profound sentence will technically hang considered. After disclosures in inere was no double about this the second time, last month, when on nearing the completion of his academic studies the candidate applied for glare of publicity, the General studies the candidate applied for Assembly of the Church of what is termed "trials for Scotland will have to decide licence." He was refused by the narrowest of margins: one distinguished member of the Presbytery is hringing a separate petition to the assembly on Monday alleging that the pro-ceedings violated natural justice in that Mr Nelson had no

> It seems common to both sides of the argument that Mr Nelson is as "good" a convicted murderer, if one might so speak, as the church is ever likely to have. He has paid his penalty, or as much of it as the Secretary of State for Scotland deemed necessary; the sincerity of his remorse is not doubted; psychiatrists have judged him entirely mentally fit; he has had the most careful testing as to his personal qualities by senior clergymen very experienced in these things; and he has behaved properly in the course of the affair. Without all those ingredients the water would be a lot muddier.

The church might have stage, a much more defensible decision than to refuse him at this one. The very publicity symbolic quality: what happens to Mr Nelson will stand for what the church feels about repentant sinners in general, in the public mind. "Neither will I condemn thee: go and sin no more" is a compelling text for the case, and it is difficult to see how the Church of Scotland can honour it except by allowing Mr Nelson's career to resume. The hesitations and the controversy are entirely understandable, and indeed the more agonised the decision the more it will be respected, provided it is the faithful one.

Behind the specific issue is a more general one, about the automatic assumptions made in the church and in society concerning the moral standing of the clergy. They are presumed to be exemplary and to lead exemplary lives, and to be unfit for the cloth if otherwise. There is a danger in such attitudes, and it is not obvious they are truly Christian. The church is a church of sinners, and there is nothing immaculate about one section of it, those whose vocation is to serve the institution full time (as clergymen). The General Assembly will obviously bear this in mind when it comes to make its vetting and recommending can-refused him at the very first decision in the Nelson case.

PICTURES FROM AN EXHIBITION

Even Sir Joshua has a garland of his own - round the neck and down as far as the knees, like the ones they throw over the heads of Grand Prix champions at the moment of victory. But the Royal Academy's festive spirit, at the opening of its 216th summer show today, falls parsimoniously short of actual laurels and roses, and the statue's garland is in plastic, durable as Reynolds's reputation, though perceptibly more faded. But inside the Academy the flowers and bunting up the grand stairs are fresh, not yet bruised by skirts and elbows on the way up.

To judge from yesterday's private view, there will be quite a press on the stairs today, though it will no longer be drawn on by the prospect of iced drinks among the pictures and the cheerful sound of champagne corks popping. Now that the Tory Conference has withdrawn from contention, the RA's private view is one of the of the best vantage points for study of the English summer hat. It is one of those occasions when every other face seems elusively familiar. Was it Sir Hugh . . . or a to the bed is Lucian Freud's?

truant junior minister . . . or the subject of that portrait in acrylic in the last room, torn between hope and dread of being recog-nised? Or the first-time exhibitor, dodging back yet again to see if her urban pastoral has been tipped the red spot yet? Or her mother, hovering with her back to it, and her ears wide open? A distracting smell of onions rises. not from that giant culinary stilllife, but from the restaurant downstaurs.

All this, and pictures too. Hurry if you want one: they are going like hot cakes. On the very first day the show had a turnover of a cool quarter-million and deservedly so. The old rift between the RA and all that was vital in art was healed long ago. Perhaps it was always half a legend, necessary to those seeking something to react against: and what else is an Academy for? There are still a few major painters who keep aloof from the all-embracing institution, but even they are often here in spirit, drawn in by the exercise of the sincerest form of flattery. Surely that lady pinned like a specimen

Certainly not. But surely that uneasy image in monochrome is a Francis Bacon? Not exactly.

In fact the first impression on walking round the show is of renewing acquaintances with many husy friends. What a mileage Sir Hugh must have put in, betweeen Bombay, Aegina and Keyhaven! How comprehensively Norman Adams has milked the sunflower. Carel Weight - how colourful this year! Ruskin Spear, ingenious as ever with a Carel Weight of his own. And there is old Bonnard again, and Matisse up there ... Cezanne has been putting in some dogged work, we see and of course Van Gogh is represented in every room. It would be unfair to accuse the show of being derivative when so many pictures are so delightful and so very few duds. It is no shame in art to speak an existing language, if one can speak it forcefully - indeed, it is hardly possible not to. And the spectator, in the first flush of enjoyment, notices most easily the pleasures he is used to noticing. Originality takes longer to sink in, and the show has only just opened.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Chinese chill for British products

From Professor P. Havard-Williams Sir, Having recently returned from China as a member of a delegation under a bilateral cultural agreement with China, I was interested to see in today's Times (May 10) that the Chinese Prime Minister, Mr Zhao Ziyang, is visiting European countries and the EEC but not Britain.

In view of the poor showing of a British presence in China, one is not surprised. We saw Mars bars, a collection of Macmillan books and a piece of microfilming equipment as the only evidence of British existence. Universities we visited had formal agreements of cooperation with other European countries and the United States - hus not Britain. Such British trade publications as we saw were out of date.

Perhaps we should try to encourage Mr Zhao Ziyang to come to see up after all – in lerms of pure commercial self-interest, and quite apart from his importance as premier of a country of a thousand million people fast developing towards modernisation. Yours faithfully.

P. HAVARD-WILLIAMS. Loughborough University, Department of Library and Information Studies. Loughborough, Leicestershire.

From Mrs Ruth Dunlop Sir, I notice on page 6 of today's Times (May 14) that three-course gournet meals, costing up to £10, are available to dogs in the Cote d'Azur.

On page 7 appears a first-hand report from drought-stricken Ethio-pia alleging that between five and seven million buman beings could starve to death in the next two months.

Does this point a moral? Yours faithfully, RUTH DUNLOP, 53 Circular Road. Jordanstown, Newtownabbey, co Antrim. May 14.

Whose barrier?

From Mr E. J. Barker Sir, Many housebolders in the area served by the Thames Water Authority will probably think that Mr William Shelton, MP (May 9) has chosen a singularly unfortunate example to justify the abolition of the GLC.

This unelected quango, whose setting-up was fiercely opposed by both Conservative and Labour parties on the GLC., has certainly not proved itself more efficient than an elected local authority if the

to go by.
No matter what authority was responsible for the Thames Barrier a major part of the cost would have been met by central government and the design would have been carried out by consultants. As to contract management it appears to be a sad fact of life that most major contracts, and few approach this magnitude, are bedevilled by delays. Yours faithfully, E. J. BARKER.

Cricket proposals

From Mr David Gravell Sir, What Humphrey Brooke (May 3) says about ceasing the covering of wickets must echo the wishes of countless cricket lovers. So how. rather than just shrug our shoulders as your other correspondent of May 3 advocates, do we achieve our aim without cutting down playing hours very much in showery weather?

Surely it cannot be beyond the wit of man, and certainly of Edgbaston man, to devise something which will cover the entire field except the setual wicket, by means of some movable "window" in the part that covers the table.

As for the dreaded and discredited word "professional", was it not that exceptionally shrewd cricketer Mike Brearley who quite recently defined a professional (sportsman) as someone who would do almnst anything for money?

All right then, let there be more money for those teams willing to play on my sort of uncovered wickets and less for those who are not willing. Yours faithfully

DAVID GRAVELL, Great Barnetts, Leigh,

South African moves

From Mr M. E. Bailey Sir, Speedier and more skilful pens than mine will have responded to your recent comments on the South African Government's moves and to the question, what actions of that government would satisfy its critics?

One which has repeatedly been called for within that country could be called a "non-action": to halt now the "surplus people project" - which is to remove over the next 15 years, yet another quarter of a million persons from their homes and to encourage them to move "voiuntarily" by ceasing npkeep of schools etc in Cape locations - would carry some conviction of good intent towards buman families and a real move towards a juster society. Yours faithfully,

M. E. BAILEY, 76 Upper Walthamstow Road, E17. May 11.

Putting a true value on teaching

From Mr George Walker
Sir, It is well into the evening and I have just ended a meeting with six of my colleagues and an educational psychologist. The teachers are all highly qualified in their own disciplines - mathematics. English, science, modern languages and so on - but that was not important. We were meeting to discuss a small handful of pupils who are socially at risk; society's young casualties whose vulnerability was obvious before they even entered the school. My staff have been expressing their articulate concern and care without a trace of sentimentality from a background of detailed notes, accurate reports, meetings with parents, visits to homes and contacts with other social agencies. We have met here, long after the school day ended, because, in a similarly unsentimental way, we believe that our work will help these young people to live happier lives in the society around them.

Meetings roughling like this will

Meetings something like this will have been taking place all over the country amongst those who work in what used to be called public service but has sadly been renamed the public sector. Now those who devote the public sector. their life's work to the Civil Service. the health service, the social services and the education service are being told in several ways (of which the level of pay awards is only one) that they have become a burden on the society that they are committed to

Yours faithfully. GEORGE WALKER, Headmaster, The Cavendish School, Warners End Road, Hemel Hempstead. Hertfordshire.

From Mr J. S. Duckworth Sir, Has it occurred to John Grimer (May 15) that the more "good will" we teachers offer the more we devalue ourselves?

If ever we hope to be a highly paid, highly respected profession, then we must be seen to be purely and simply highly efficient teachers.

As long as we take on the work of unpaid monitor, amateur group leader, social worker, travel agent and entrepreneur (I am a director of music in a large comprehensive school) then, bowever much we feel this should be a part of our job, however much we appear to enjoy the ego-trip a lot of this brings, no amount of persuasion will convince

From Professor C. G. Broyden Sir, The beadmaster of Bramston

School (May 8) may well be right in regarding teacher's salaries as inadequate, but teachers are by no means at the bottom of the pile. The linebpin of the hospital service, the ward sister, whose responsibilities are such that for her even a one-day strike is out of the question, can only look forward 10 a maximum salary of £8,103 p.a. To her, a scale rising to £9,132 p.a. must look positively

Yours faithfully. C. G. BROYDEN, University of Essex. Department of Computer Science, Wivenhoe Park, Colchester, Essex. May 8.

From Mr John C. Lees Sir, I spent yesterday (Sunday, May 13) involved in teaching French to a voluntary group of 24 pupils, aged 15 and 16, for seven hours. We allowed ourselves 20 minutes for lunch. I worked with three serving teachers, two of whom had not only provided a buffet lunch for 45 people, but also paid for the ingredients out of their own pockets.

We were helped throughout the day by 26 postgraduate modern language students of this institution who, for no remuneration and without any surety that their travelling expenses will be reim-bursed, similarly taught for seven hours. The whole activity required a massive input of administration and lesson-planning beforehand.

The huilding at the school was opened by the caretaker at approxi-mately 9.15 am and closed by him at approximately 4,45 pm. He will receive £36. In order to cover his costs it became necessary at the last minute to charge each of the children £2.

It is, therefore, small wonder that react somewhat unfavourably to comments by the uninformed about the absence of professionalism by the teaching profession and the absence of commitment on the part of new entrants and would-be entrants. Yours faithfully, JOHN C. LEES,

University of Bristol, School of Education, Helen Wodehouse Building, 35 Berkeley Square, Bristol, Avon.

Lonrho and the House of Fraser

From Mr R. W. Rowland

Sir, Today's editorial in your financial section, "Is Rowland bigger than Tebbit and the PM?" concerns certain resolutions put forward by Lonrho for the House of Fraser a.g.m for June 28, 1984, Both the title and the contents of the editorial seem calculated to lead your readers to believe that these present resolutions are a breach of Lonrho's undertakings to the Secretary of State and are therefore an affront to the Government. This is not the case at all.

On March 15, 1979, after a full inquiry, the Monopolies and Mergers Commission approved the acquisition by Lonrho of a 30 per cent interest in the House of Fraser. On December 9, 1981, the commission, by a majority decision (which was widely criticised in the press, including The Times) recommended against Lonrho being allowed to bid for the remaining 70 per cent.

The commission made recommendations for restricting Lonrho's rights as a sharebolder in respect of the 30 per cent which it was permitted to retain. The nndertakings given by Lourho to the Secretary of State were accompanied by a letter written on the latter's behalf stating, "I can confirm that the undertakings do not affect the normal rights of Lonrho as a shareholder of House of Fraser".

In accepting this wording, the then Deputy Director General of the Office of Fair Trading stated that be was prepared to advise the Secretary of State to accept the undertaking to the Secretary of State which restricted the acquisition of further shares, but which did not in any way limit the exercise of sharebolders' rights".

undertakings. Accordingly, the whole basis of the editorial is incorrect and misleading. When the resolution is put it will be for the shareholders to decide forward resolutions at general meetings for consideration by the whole body of sharebolders.

Yesterday the Office of Fair Trading confirmed to Lonrho that the resolution now put forward did not amount to any breach of the

whether they accept that resolution for demerger, which they passed a year ago, should commue to be disregarded by the directors they have appointed.

Leaving the matter to the sharebolders in this way would not be contrary to Government policy. Indeed, it would be contrary to the Government policy of non-inter-ference if it allowed itself to be used as a tool to defeat the shareholders' wishes. There are approximately 32,000 shareholders in House of Fraser and 62,000 shareholders in Lonrho.

May I remind you of what was said by the Financial Editor of The Times in an editorial of December 10. 1981, commenting on the commission's report.

The market certainly has its faults, but surely it is preferable without holding any brief for Lonrho that shareholders should ultimately decide the fate of a company in the absence of an obvious monopoly. I would only add that, before the resolutions, Lonrho obtained clear-ance so to do from the Takeover Yours faithfully, TINY ROWLAND, Lonrho plc. Cheapside House, 138 Cheapside, EC2.

Needs of mentally ill From Mr Leslie H. W. Paine and

Sir. It is ironic that this particular institution should be accused of "failing the needs of mentally ill people" (report, April 16). As the only specialist postgraduate teaching hospital for psychiatry in the UK, the Bethlem Royal and Maudsley hospitals, together with the Institute of Psychiatry, form an organisation with a record of achievement in clinical care, teaching and research unrivalled in the world.

Since 1970 we have, in addition to our national and international work, accepted responsibility for providing psychiatric bospital care to the people of south Southwark. The Health Advisory Service report which Mr Timmins quotes makes it very clear that for the most part the services we offer to south Southwark are impressive and working well. Certainly we are not above reproach in everything we do. Like any other health authority and medical school, we are limited in the help that we can give directly or indirectly to mentally ill people of all kinds, both locally and nationally, by the resources at our disposal.

We strive to make our limited means serve wider ends and if we were given more we could do more. Although it is Government policy that the care of the mentally ill. elderly and mentally handicapped should have increased priority within the NHS we, as the major postgraduate centre in this field, are nevertheless prevented by lack of finance from taking the new initiarives that we would wish.

It seems to us therefore that in trying to condense a long, wide-ranging report into a short concentrated one, Mr Timmins has inadvertently telescoped the facts into an implication that is incorrect and unfair as far as we are concerned, hut valid perhaps for those who should be implementing national NHS policy. Yours faithfully, LESLIE H. W. PAINE, House

Governor and Secretary, PETER NOBLE, Chairman, Medical Executive Committee, Bethlem Royal & Maudsley Hospitals, GERALD F. M. RUSSELL, Professor of Psychiatry, ROBIN M. MURRAY, Dean, Institute of Psychiatry, The Maudsley Hospital, Denmark Hill, SE5.

Taking the air

From Dr Charles Warren

Sir, Recent reports of the loss of a Bulgarian climber on Everest with-out oxygen raise the question whether it is not time that mountaineers began to take much more seriously the medical risks of very high alutude climbing. Even in the thirties the late Dr

Raymond Greene and I were beginning to appreciate the risks of trying to climb Everest without oxygen. I bave to confess, however, that at that time, like other climbers, I would have liked the mountain to have been climbed for the first time without it. But that was not to be. However, sooner or later it had to be proved, one way or another, whether such a feat was possible. And eventually Messner proved that it was; but at what enormous risk we can deduce from his description of his descent from the summit on that first occasion (May, 1978).

Ever since the thirties there have been reports of deaths and residual disabilities due to high-alutude sickness. I personally believe that Peter Boardman and Joe Tasker perished on Everest last year either directly or indirectly due to oxygen lack. They were not the kind of chaps to fall on that kind of ground unless there had been some other factor. But they had been high already on the mountain and had retreated to base to rest before starting again. Now, past experience on Everesi had shown that, nearly always, once a man had been really high (27,000 ft), he had shot his bolt. The feat of climbing Mount

Everest without oxygen, and at great risk, has now been accomplished several times. Surely, Sir, enough is enough? CHARLES WARREN. Buck Croft. Felsted, Dunmow,

Essex. Councils' obligation

From Councillor Raymond Durrant Sir, Mr John Edmonds, the Trade Union Side Secretary for the National Joint Council for Local Authorities' Services, writes in his letter of May 2 to reprimand you for not referring to the moral obli-gations of a local authority towards its staff when aftering service contracts, particularly in relation to abolishing the retainer paid to parttime school meals staff during the holiday period when they are not working.

When the retainer was negotiated it was difficult to find staff to work for only a few hours a day for a limited number of weeks during the year, but conditions bave clearly changed.

The elected members of any authority collectively have obligations not only to the staff. employed by that authority, but also The ordinary rights of share-holders include the right to put forward resolutions of the right to those who elect them and Mr John Edmonds should surely recognize that there is a moral obligation. owed to ratepayers that authorities do not continue to pay over the rate for the job where conditions have changed.

Umbrella man

From Dr Ronald Hope Sir. Jonas Hanway, founder, of The Marine Society, is reputed to have been the first man to carry an umbrella in the City of London - circa 1750 - and was stoned by sedan-chair men for his pains. It was dwarfish object", as sold in New York, (feature, May 5), but neither was it Dr Ribeiro's "sturdy tra-ditional English type" (letter, May 12).

The first City umbrella was apparently a very handsome collap-sible model. Although lost by that time, it was described in a letter to The Marine Society by a descendant not Philip Norman's "furtive.

of Hannels Society by a descendant of Hanway's in 1895. "The handle", according to this evidence, "was ebony and all covered with small fruits and flowers. The outside was pale-green silk, and the inside was stonecoloured satin. When opened, it was like a small tent, and when shut it was all curiously jointed and would fold up to the length of a man's hand."

Could James Smith, perhaps, reinvent it and start a new export Yours faithfully, RONALD HOPE, Director,

The Marine Society, 202 Lambeth Road, SE1. May 14.

Out of touch

From Ms Pauline Macaulay Sir, With regard to Mr W. J. Reilly's letter (May 12) remarking on the lack of camaraderie of the English jogger, rest assured. Mr Reilly, of San Francisco, that the English jogger is neither lonely nor mindless. On Shanks's pony, as on other means of transport, the English man or woman has the usual British reserve of not wishing to make conversation, bowever brief, especially before breakfast and especially before he has read The Times and even before hunch.

As for his being unaware of the beauty of his surroundings, nothing could be further from the truth. It is precisely because he is communing both with pature and his own mind and body that be may not even notice more expansive souls, such as vonrself.

Also, churlish though it may seem, Mr Reilly, he may simply be trying to conserve his breath! Very sincerely, PAULINE MACAULAY, 16 Chepstow Place, W2. May 12.

The research is based at Queen Exabeth College and University College (University of London) and is currently concerned with cancers of the cervix, breast, endocrine system and colon. Emphasis has been place on the detection of pre-cancerous abnormalities by the measurement of nuclear genetic material (DNA). In all cases of cervical and breast cancer which have been studied and heast number over 100 patients in each instance) the method has been shown to give an early warning of ing the cross and containing and bearing the failur and sin such an acceptance entailed.

It is interesting that only very recently this idea of containing, rather than removing, has turned full circle and is being applied to research work, not on bodily organs, but cancer cells. A small research group at Aston University is engaged in renovating cancer cells with drug treatment. The process is one of renovation, not destruction of the affected cells.

Recently I was told of a young woman who had suffered a breakdown. She was described as suffering with her nerves and had, I was informed, been referred to a "Nerve doctor" not a neurologist, but a euphemism for a psychiatrist. In this example, the model of the cross suggests that rather than talk of breakdown it is more approppriate to speak of break-through. For Christ him-self the break-through was from death to life. For us, in our daily lives, it is breakthrough from despair to hope, from avoidance to acceptance, from fear to confidence, from weakness to strength, from darkness and doubt to light and assurance. It is what is called healing and what is healing is salvation.

To complete this second model. Jesus always addressed himself to the whole person. their ailment, their faith, their state of grace. So often today we are myopic. Consider the person who suffers continual headaches, is prescribed tablets by the doctor, is referred to a neurologist a psychatrist, is advised to relax, to pray and to attend to their own physical fitness. Still the headaches persist, until an attentive neighbour asks about the person's eyesight. Fitted with a new pair of spectacles, the headaches cease.

So intent are we on discovering a sophisticated cause for the pain, it is easy to miss the obvious. The first model of removal can so easily lead to the therapist adopting a myopic stance. The second, of containing, readily lends itself to work such as family therapy where, not only is the whole person family group too.

The way of the cross, with its emphasis on steadfastness, highlights the necessity always to think of healing in the context of wholeness, it is sad that the Anglican church in its new prayer book ignores this and persists in dividing the human being into three. The prayers for the sick are for those who suffer in body, mind and challenges this division and it is away from the intense pressure to discover an instant cure and into the area of continuous care. An old French doctor once wrote:

But university scholarships in classics were not numerous at that. time and in his final year he switched to science and mathematics, entering the University of Manchester as a science scholar in 1923 to read Physics under Bragg. He graduated in 1926 in the process setting his examiners the problem of finding reasons why he should not be declared to be perfect in all his papers. Bragg's influence was immediate and Taylor began to make his own mark, publishing his first paper on the structure of caesium and ammonium sulphates in 1928.

His perfection in detail, coupled with a deep instinct for logic and insight, were allied to an accurate experimental technique and made him one of the most active members of the Bragg team which was extend-ing X-ray analysis to com-pounds of an increasingly complex character. He made contributions to the study of the aluminium silicates, but the paper on the "Structure of Sanidine and other Felspars" in Manchester on silicate strucfelspars and was regarded as the and interesting varieties.

Most of the direct links with this vibrant but ephemeral art have been broken by the passage of time, and yet music hall confounds Mr Booth and other obituarists and refuses to die. The memory does not just linger on but is being actively sustained

When Radio 4 devoted its Tuesday Call phone-in programme to music hall a few months ago, the response was greater than for almost any other programme in the series. The interest ranges from en-thusiasts, happy to pay £25 for an old song sheet or handbill, to university students researching

"To write of old music hall themes for their music hall is to doctorates, write an obitnary, for the old music hall is dead, dead as focus of the enthusiast following, puts it down to a nostalgia for the Victorian era, the desire to escape the drab conformity of 960s there were still artists like reminiscences of often obscure performers. Mr Ashton is himself from the tradition of the Varieties, Leeds, one of the few surviving Victorian music hall buildings and home of the television show The Good Old Days.

With him on that 1958 bill was "Jane", an act based on the Daily Mirror cartoon; a stripper called Peaches Page: and the Amazing Carla, "glamour in contortion". A few years earlier Ellis Ashton was out front when Old Mother Riley (Arthur Lucan) died on stage just a few feet away, before the curtain went up, bowever. A few weeks ago, working as a scene hand for London Weekend Televison he was in the wings when Tommy

Cooper collapsed. This tragie coincidence is not inappropriate to our theme since although Cooper was essentially a television com-edian, his act, anarchic and boisterous, was in true music hall style and had he started 50 vears earlier be would surely have toured the halls. But the crucial difference between tele-vision and music hall is that the latter set up a direct relationship between the performer and the

The point is underlined by Aileen Waites, producer of a present day music hall, the Aba Daba. "Our performers are professional actors who spend most of their time talking into where there is no no clapping, no

But when they come here they are totally involved with the audience. In fact, it is a very good way of learning stagecraft and putting over their person-alities. The audience sits at tables having a deak initial tables, having a drink, joining in if it wants to. I would almost say that in music hall, the audience is the star."

The Aba Daba does not not attempt to reproduce music hall exactly as it was, feeling that a straight imitation is bound to be a pale one. "What we set out to do", says Aileen Waites, "is to recreate the atmosphere and maintain the spirit, while at the same time presenting the material in today's terms."

In this approach the Aha Daba differs from its friendly rival, the Players', which concentrates on an authentic Victorian or Edwardian setting. with marvellously detailed costumes and props. The high membership of the Players', a more or less constant 6,500, is further testament to the continuing popularity of the art.

Any attempt to perform music hall today must depend. to an extent, on guesswork. The original artists are no longer around and the very essence of the music hall performance was a collaboration between artist and andience that came to an end as soon as the curtain came

Some help does exist in the form of recordings. Music hall artists were reluctant to put that people would no longer come to see their act. And what recordings were made were often scratchy and barely audible. But when electrical recording arrived, some of the old stars were persuaded into the studios; so it is possible to get an idea of the quality of Gus Elen, Harry Champion and other famous performers.

Of course the voice was only part of the act - to gauge the full impact it was necessary to see the artist as well. The trouble was that music hall performers tended to have the same attitude towards the cinema as they had to recordings; and in any case sound did not arrive until the 1920s, which was too late to catch many of the outstanding figures.

Marie Lloyd, for instance, died in 1922, and although there are a few fragments of her on film, they mean little without her voice. It needs some imagination to underwoman with the toothy grin was acclaimed by everyone from T. Eliot downwards as the undisputed queen of the halls.

There is nothing on film of Dan Leno nor, more surpris-ingly, is there a visual record of Max Miller in action, even though be lived well into the television age. In Miller's case the probable explanation is the blueness of his material, which would have put him out of contention for the U certificate normally given 10 films of still coming to light.

When, about 15 years ago, the cinema bistorian and collector, John Huntley, presented a music hall bill at the National Film Theatre he was hard pressed to find enough material to fill the time.

Now, thanks to assiduous detective work and some luck. he reckons he bas enough for balf-a-dozen evenings. His star item, mainly because of its age. is a short sequence of Little Tich and bis 2ft-long boots, filmed at the Paris Exhibition of 1900 and preserved in the French film archive. It even has rudimentary sound, which was provided by hanging pieces of wood together under the stage to synchronize with the clopping of Ticb's footwear. An even less likely source, the Library of Congress in the United States, yielded footage of Vesta Victoria, while a fragment of George Robey was discovered in a rusting tin on a market barrow in Kentish Town, north London; and film of the hizarre dancing of Wilson, Keppel and Betty came to light in the bankrupt stock of a little company in Hammersmith whose usual output was music hall, which took off in the instructional shorts about mathematics and how to frame pictures.

Occasionally, late in their lives, music ball stars did appear in films, and a B picture of the early 1930s called Soy it With Music contains a "benefit night" sequence featuring Florie Forde and an octogenarian Charles Cohurn belting out The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo".

There also exists excellent footage of Lily Morris performing "Why Am I Always the Bridesmaid?", which emerges not only as a comic song hut a heartfelt one and serves as a reminder that the best music hall artists were considerable actors. And, thanks to Pathetone, the splendid cockney comedian Gus Elen, looking rather like Popeye the Sailor, is preserved for all time singing his famous lament for the henpecked husband, "It's a Great Big Shame".

The songs are one of the most potent legacies of music half and evidence of how faithfully this popular art reflected and drew upon the experience of the people who made up the bulk of the audience, the urhan working class of Victorian England. Much of the social history of the period can be gleaned from

Dr Jacqueline Bratton, reader in English Literature at London University, did her PbD thesis on Victorian ballads, including music hall songs, later turned this into a book and bas continued to explore aspects of music hall as a way of illuminating nineteenth-century popular culture. crème de noix before a magnificently carved walnut dresser. This ability to squeeze the last drop of value from scarce resources explains why a relatively poor area like Perigord is rich in culture, food and drink, Such an integrated response to rural life - something which seems, sadly, to have vanished from the English countryside - also takes the edge off the apparent incongruity of a place where men who drive Citroen-Maseratis interfere with geese.

The very essence of iote-gration is chobrol, the thick local soup, leced with wine, which not only contains a little of everything but is said to have medicinal properties. Fittingly, the best restaurant on the Dronne, at Brantôme, is called Le Chabrol.

It was there, gazing as the river hubbled over the weir down to the beautiful abbey. that I saw and cooquered two puddiogs with the power and proportions of MIRV missiles: leaves of flaky pastry and creme

Chantilly enclosing a whole pear and smothered in hol caramel sauce. It was also there that the waiters watched unconcerned as my daughter clumsily defused ber MIRV.

Naturally, Perigord and the Dronne valley have been discovered. The British middle classes went there io convoys of Volvos in the 1960s - it is said that was the furthest they could drive from the coast in a day - and many settled.

Yet there is enough regional colour and eccentricity to swamp their presence. Near Verteillac, for instance. I found a farmer with a pear in a bottle. Like some ancient mariner with a beloved nautical model, he described how many years before he had placed the bottle over a branch of pear blossom.

"This barge", it's time to put your back into said Toby, "like a bome. Got all grunt and groan it open and in comes your boat, a perfect fit, home got." At two inches of water either side, three-and-a-half and not the whisper of a bump.

How did she do that?
Through the lock we close the gates behind us, for we canal folk are incredibly thoughful But he was wrong to call it a barge since strictly it was a narrowboat, as opposed to a longboat, which is what the always let it through first. The water in the lock, you see, will then be at our level. The worst thing is to follow another boat up the canal with nothing coming the other way. It's like driving up the Marylebone Road in the early morning with all the lights at red.

You cannot see a kingfisher, though, on the Marylebone Road, And the canal has other compensations, like silence. broken only by rustling reeds; like great red hawthorn berries, briony and blackberries in clusters on the bank, to be picked defily as you glide past; and pubs to lunch in (unless of course it's Sunday, when hungry travellers can starve for all the pubs care).

We slept soundly, exhausted by fresh air and exercise. I wonder, though, if we worked as hard in our six-berth, centrallyheated, gas-ovened floating pencil as did the gnarled bargees who 100 years ago sweated to get the coal from Birmingham to Worcester and sweated again to get the grain and timber back to Birmingham.

Did they, I wonder, ever bump the baoks?

Path to maturity takes a scenic route

Times garden project. which began with an underdeveloped garden in Fulham, West London, last August, is now assuming a pattern. Spring colour has faded and it is time for work on the lawn and solving watering problems.

The structure planting of the garden is complete but it will be a few years before maturity As the sbrubs were planted in their final positions. no attempt has been made to provide an instant garden and there are wide spaces between them. Bulbs which were planted in the shrubberies to give an early spring colour, have gone over and these, for a while, will provide foliage at ground level. Planting of the groups of bulbs was too wide but this can be corrected when the foliage dies

In order to provide a better cover in the shrubbery summer flowering plants can be planted. Herbaceous plants are preferred and will go in as and when they are found.

Plants such as crocosmias, heleniums, rudbeckias, and campanulas come 10 mind but the owner has his own ideas. Bedding plants could be used. such as antirrhinums, pelargoniums, begonias and impatiens to give the beds a lift. It is important not to plant too close to the shrubs as this may cause root damage.

Water is the big problem now and, although watering has been

The lawn is the part of the garden which needs attention now: the grass should be cut as it is too long. We were late in sowing and in some parts the grass is thin. Oversowing has taken place but the dry weather and lack of sufficient water has inhibited germination. Weeds. in particular chickweed, are present in large quantities, and these must be dealt with now.

Once the grass has been cut and watering is complete, the areas of chickweed should be raked out, so far as is possible. Allow the grass to recover from this raking and give it a feed. PBI. ICI and Fisons all have good lawn fertilizers. Once the grass is growing strongly. a weedkiller can be applied such as Murphy's Lawn Weedkiller. Keep the lawn well fed, watered and and use the weedkiller at least twice over the summer and the lawn will soon become the green sward we expect.

Next week's opening of the born-again Heal's after nine months of reconstruction is a double celebration: it is also the twentieth birthday of Habitat. Now side by side by Conran, the two stores present a lifetime of furnishing under one roof.

At 196. Tottenham Court Road, London WI, on the site once known as Miller's Stables, before John Harris Heal moved his small bedding company there in 1840, you will be able to furnish your first small flat at Habitat and your first large house at Heal's.

Round the corner, still in the same block, you will find everything you need for your baby at Mothercare and your teenage children will be able to shop at a new branch of Now. In the offices above are the design studios and the offices of the £325m Conran empire. "The most exciting furnishing store in London and probably in the whole of Europe" is how Sir Terence Conran describes his latest such a claim might be wishful thinking, but from the man who 20 years ago became furnisher hy appointment to a whole generation of first-homemakers it shows only the merest hint of hyperbole. At last there is life after Habitat.

That is precisely what the new Heal's is aiming to provide - furniture for the young people who bought Habitat in the 1960s and found, when they moved to bigger houses and wanted better-quality furniture in the same idiom, that they had nowhere to go.

They would not have gone to the Heal's which was expiring when Conran acquired it last year. Its authority had waned in the 1970s as it failed to move on from the Scandinavian furni-ture, advanced lighting and Berber carpets which it bad introduced so successfully to the British market, and it never managed to come to terms with the feeling for nostalgia which superseded the age of teak.

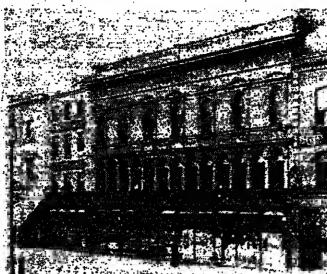

It has taken Conran's master hand to prove that nostalgia can be satisfied with something more progressive than period reproduction. He is in the business of producing modern classics, and it is entirely appropriate that he should have acquired this particular furniture shop, for he and the most famous Heal, Ambrose, who joined the family firm in 1893, have a great deal in common.

the first John Harris Heal, has been described as "that rare combination a designer with an adventurous imagination and an insured shopkers." So is an inspired shopkeeper". So is possesses a far more abiding profits.

You would not then have thought of s cut glass, decorative china or traditional silver plate. You can get them all now - but the glass is cut simply in deep vertical grooves, the plain white china is rounded and the decorated china has patterns which will age gracefully.

The softer lines are echoed on the first and second floors in the upholstery and cabinet work.

Health-food addicts may lament the passing of Cranks, but in its place is a new resturant offering morning coffee, a table d'hôte three-course lunch menu for £6 and a bottle of bouse wine for £4.10, and tea and cakes.

There is still a strong emphasis on the beds and bedding which have always been the mainstay of Heal's. They are still band made in the Victorian workshops at the back of the building, where the forewoman, Florence Summerfield, who won the British Empire medal for industrial service in 1980, is still working part-time at the age of 80. A Heal's bed is not cheap, but those who buy them are in no doubt that they are the hest. A new four-poster - frame £695, mattress £995 - has been designed in ash with an economy of line that is worthy of Ambrose Heal himself.

Furniture! actually | designed by Ambrose is being reproduced in limited editions from archive photographs. They include a dining table £895, dining chair £135, toilet table £395, chest £595 and wardrobe £1.195, all in solid and vencered limed

Those who invest in such pieces might reflect on an advertisement in an 1871 Heal's catalogue for portable furniture for an officer's tent. It offers a bed, pillows, blankets, counterpane, bath, washstand, basin and looking-glass, ell pecked into a box which forms a wardrobe and has a lid which serves as a table. All for £12 2s

Terence Conran is aware that value for money in furniture is not always immediately obvi-ous. "You can show people half-e-dozen chests from £40 to £140 and they find it difficult to see where the additional value

"There is a lot of prejudice about furniture. People think plywood is for tea chests and that solid wood must be best. But it isn't best if it warps and splits when you get it home. Modern technology can im-prove quality, but the public is loath to accept it. If Chippendale hed had chipboard to put his veneers on he would have been a very happy man.

"But what I hope we will get back to at Heal's is the old, before-the-war feeling of Eng-lishness and quality. The English interior uses natural materials without flamboyance a comfortable dogs-on-thesofa look rather then a smart penthouse where everybody sits around looking as if they were concerned about creasing their

Anyone looking for straws in the wind should pay attention. Conran doesn't just sell goods, he markets ideas and he has an uncanny knack of interpreting a mood long before it becomes a trend.

Sometimes his ideas have such an impact they become labels which are difficult to shake off. He is mildly irritated hy the people who still insist on talking about Habitat as if it sold nothing but stripped pine; "It comes from a misunder-standing by people who can't recognize that what we have been trying to do is sell simple, well designed, well presented furniture in the same way that Marks & Spencer sell simple, well designed underwear and Spinghous sell well-produced Sainsbury sell well-produced, well presented food."

He is amused but flattered that he is still regarded as a purveyor of good taste to the masses. "Better than being a purveyor of bad taste", be says. "We have never tried to thrust taste down people's throats. We are just saying that here are nice, practical things

Showtime sustenance for weary pilgrims

The Chelsea Flower Show begins on Tuesday, so this week we look at places where wilting visitors can take much-need refreshment

While some of the more exotic blooms on display at the Chelsea Flower Show will undoubtedly head for Pierre Koffmann's highly-rated Tante Claire (already beavily booked). or for the Roux Brothers' Gayvers (reviewed last week, and open for lunch specially for the show), most visitors will settle for more modest watering-holes. This need not result in a drop in quality, as a visit to La Fontana reveals.

Set just along from the show ground, in a terrace of antique shops on Pimlico Road, La Fontane's distinctive frontage hints of its style. Horticulturalists will particularly appreciate its miniature ferns and well-stocked window boxes, though they may have reservations about the rather gimerack neon sign announcing ristorante

Inside, the decor is equally distinctive — instead of tiled floors and tuhular furniture, the room is well-carpeted, comfortably furnished and upholstered in bright shades of red. The plain white walls are hung with oil-paintings, (which are for sale should the fancy take you) and hanging baskets complete a cool and tasteful interior. The atmosphere is marred only, for myself at any rate, by the sounds of Andy Williams and Engelbert Humperdinck on the world, it is highly unlikely he Skilled or had ever come across winespeak - that tedious stream of jargon and technical terms with which wine bores and snobs sprinkle their conversation. Wine waiters and dedicated American wine-drinkers seem particularly adept in the art of winespeak, as do those wine merchants that are more interested in self-aggrandisement and the sound of their own voice than they are in sorting out their customers' queries. A good deal of it is also beard at the grander sort of wine-tasting, with enough purple prose exchanged over the spittoon to match the colour within.

Perhaps the worst example 1 sparkling-wine tasting l organized a few years ago, when a member of the panel - an Australian wine buff - handed in tasting notes that were an incomprehensible jumble of jargon and chemical formulae. He probably knew exactly what he meant hy it all (though I still have my doubts) but no one else

Thankfully, deciphering most winespeak is a good deal easier. One of the most common examples is that seemingly innocent word "corked", or "corky". You will no doubt often have beard it in a restaurant as the diner at the next table tries to get his own back on an overbearing wine waiter. He is usually expressing his discontent about the bits of cork bobbing aboot in his glass. In fact, bowever, the clumsy removal of a cork which causes this is perfectly harmless, does not affect the wine's taste in any way and certainly does not constitute a corked wine.

A truly corked wine is verv. very rare (I have come across only one really bad example) as it fills the entire room with a horrible, musty, mushroomy smell. It used to be caused by the cork weevil munching its Next September world ebam-pion Anatoly Karpov is due to defend his title against the 20year-old challenger, Gary Kasparov. The question is: "How will he fare?" What is especially intriguing about this match is that both men are extremely formidable.

Kasparov is a player with a wonderful gift for the attack indeed, probably the most devasteting master of attack io the history of the game, Karpov is a marvellous match-player whose prowess has been tesled and fired by three strenuous matches against Viktor Kor-

In matters of technique Karpov is probably the most notable of all world champions. True, there exists a faint doubt about his endgame play which was by no means perfect at Baguio City, Philippines, in his match with Korchnoi in 1978. But since then there has been a marked improvement in that side of his game.

Until the match against Smyslov in the final of the candidates at Wilnius I favoured Karpov's chances; but in that match Kasparov dealt with positional problems with such virtuosity that I now feel myself favouring the young grandmaster's chances.

Whatever happens it is bound to be a fine match. Although normally the event should take place in the Soviet Union as both players hail from there, there is a possibility that half the match could be played in Britain, provided the necessary finance can be raised.

Who will win? The question is of importance for the future of chess, since players - especially young ones - tend to follow the style of the world champion. If Karpov wins everybody will try to become master technicians. If Kasparov is the victor then the emphasis will lie on the attack and masters will tend to think they are in their prime at 20.

That Karpov is equally at home in tactics and strategy is demonstrated by the following fine game that was played in the third round of the Phillips & Drew GLC Kings tournament earlier this month. His victory was all the more impressive because it was played agaiost Timman, one of the best of the world's younger grandmasters. White: Timman: Black: Karpov. Scotch Game. 2 N-KB3 N-OB3 4 NxP N-B3

In a lifetime of modest miscre-ance I have committed many sins; but, of the deadly seven at few status symbols of my own: least, there remain two of which to my knowledge I have not been guilty. One of these is are a joy to drive: I should like coverousness. This may be why to buy from Italian couturiers I had some difficulty trying to because I like Italian clothes I had some difficulty trying to explain to an otherwise intelligent child the meaning of the expression "Keeping up with the Joneses". The child in question finally grinned and said: "Got it. What you mean is that if Jim's mother bas just bought him a Tacchini - which she bas - and I really, desperately want one too, if I go on and on at you you'll get me one because you don't like Jim's mother very much and she can't really afford it either. Is that it?" (Tacchini apparently make very smart sportwear in stretchy, silky fabrics and "good colours". A track suit, I gather, would set me back about £75, and sports shirts start at around £30.)

I congratulated my son on grasping the essentials of covetousness - and buman nature -and followed up with the be useless to try any clever tactics as there were no circumstances under which 7 cumstances under which I could be persuaded to spend the equivalent of five weeks' child benefit oo a T-shirt – even if it were ness, particularly around the monogrammed in gold. consequences may drive them mad, namely that it is "pretty disgusting to stuff yourself on I've always wanted a Jensen other animals' flesh" because they look beautiful and

Being good at (at least one) sport is "in" - although I suspect that has never been out - and so, suprisingly, is being a bit of a "brainbox", as long as (although I couldn't give you a name), and I would certainly you don't force your high IQ like a big house in the country down your friends' throats (in my day you bad to keep pretty with the National Trust breathquiet about it). The Inner Londoo Education Authority and the GLC are "in", to the ing down my neck in the bope that on my demise I might bequeath the heap to their tender care. Apart from that, extent that you may consider my desire for worldly goods, giving up your free time to and certainly for brand names, support their cause, even if you don't go to a state school or travel a lot on buses. is limited.
In the world in which my son and his friends live, however,

Fathers who own Porsches or last year's Golf GTIs are "in"; fathers who drive Volvos (unless they are silver) or have lost their licences because of drunken driving are "out". Marathon running is "in"; jogging is "out". Getting your friend to video the film-of-themaking-of-the-video - because you've run out of tapes - is "in": video "nasties" are out.

And so it goes on. Many of last year's nine-day wonders have been superseded or thrown on to a juvenile consumer scrap heap. The digital watches on which you could also play games are as demode as a sundial. Even the Walkmen which we were all badgered to huy as Christmas presents are under slight threat of execution in my neck of the woods, partly hecause of their propensity to go wrong in the middle of a Michael Jackson track and partly because the young Narcissi are worried that their

Spitalfields story of rags and riches

The Spitalfields Festival is a was in the bands of large magnificent Christ Church is one of the noblest settings for a festival in Britain, the surroundings in the area east of Liverpool Street station are the reverse of promising. The streets are run down and plastered with the signboards of the rag trade, run by Bengalis and Bangladeshis. Close by. Brick Lane is notorious as a battleground of the National Front and in the crypt of Christ Church is a rehabilitation centre for the down-and-outs who hang around the market. Yet the lestival, which begins on May 29, is not only brave but astonishingly successful. This year's programme includes Dame Janet Baker in Berlioz's L'Enfance du Christ, John Ogdon playing Messiaen and be right to duck, If be had four Richard Rodney Bennett pertorming his own and other works with Barry Tuckwell.

Indeed, a renaissance is beginning to take place in Spitalfields, thanks to the battling of the Spitalfields Trust (not the same as the Friends of Christ Church, Spitalfields, who organize the festival). For beneath the surface is one of the handsomest areas of eighteenthcentury London, and it is despite a few bombs and the rapacity of developers - surprisingly intact. At the centre is the fruit, flower and vegetable market, which was established about 1680. But the historical character of the area has always depended on the industry that is still to the fore: clothes.

In the eighteenth century, this meant not rayon, but silk. When the area was no more than open fields surrounding St Mary's Hospital (St Mary's Spital as it was known), it was convenient for use as a "tenter ground" where cloth was stretched and sun-bleached (on tenierhooks - hence the expression). Some fields yielded clay for brick making, which explains Brick Lane. At that time the silk industry

very brave undertaking. Al- numbers of Huguenot weavers though Nicholas Hawksmoor's who left France after the revocation of the Edict of Naotes. The rag trade took over in the nineteenth century, when there was a second influx, this time of Jews, and before the Second World War, Spitalfields was almost totally Jewish.

The Bengalis started to come in the late 1950s. The Great Mosque in Fournier Street tells the whole story. Built as a Huguenot chapel, it was occupied by the London Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews before becoming a synagogue, and later a mosque. According to Mark Girouard, founding chairman of the Spitalfields Trust, the Spitalfields silk industry was orga nized rather like the rag trade of today. It was a small scale industry, in which the workers got next to nothing and the owners, or some of them, took huge profits. With the profits they built splendid mansions. Yet they chose to stay close to the sbop, their half-starved workforce living only a stone's throw away in very different accommodation; those who were only moderately prosper-ous had their houses here too. It was a precarious trade even for the men at the top: a long spell of mourning at court could mean sudden commercial death. But while silk was in fashion their houses rivalled the best in the West End.

The grandest houses are in Fournier Street, which runs beside the church. The elaborare doorcases of the otherwise sober Georgian brick fronts hin1 at the fine panelling and staircases inside. In Elder Street are some of the more modest houses, distinguished by the long rows of weavers' windows in the roof. Numbers 5 and 7 were bought, restored and sold on by the Spitalfields Trust a few years ago: 4 Princelet Street, built in 1724, was first occupied by Benjamin Truman, whose

My introduction to Spitalfields was five years ago, when I saw an extremely derelict house which I hoped to buy from the trust in Heneage Street. You had to get in through the fanlight over the door, and while entering I had a horrible vision of Winnie the Pooh visiting Rabbit - stuck, legs waving madly. The house next door was also on offer. Ingress to that was by a ladder. Both were cheap enough at £4,000 (for both, as I remember), the only problem was that the conneil thought they had already been demolished under a slum clearance scheme. The trust's idea was that if you restored them, the council would rescind the order. And it worked. For the houses were later bought by more enterprizing people than I (both architects), and have been handsomely done up. So has the brewery next door.

Christ Church itself

jewel in the crown - is participating in the rise of the area. The architect Red Mason (who sounds more like a Texan troubleshooter than a Georgian archaeologist) has recently restored the aisle windows to the north and south fronts to their original designs. The Victorians, Red told me, tried to make Hawksmoor more Mannerist than he really was. A new: apron of Tuscan-column milings has also been spread out in front of the church.

Soon Mason intends to explore the vaults. Half of them were a parochial burial ground and are still occupied by their original inhabitants, in a thousand or so coffins covered by soil, lime and charcoal. ..

The Red Arrows (25 mins) by Arthur Gibson, John Edwards and Norman Pealing: Spitfile (59 mins) and Lancaster (48 mins) both written by Brian Johnson, Night Bombers (60 mins) by Air Commodors H. I. Cozens, All Thorn EMI, £19.95 each.

The RAF held the crown for the best aerobatic team in the world long before that team became the Red Arrows. But it is still mildly startling to find that the first half of The Red Arrows, which deals with the team when it was composed of Folland Gnats, was made as long ago as 1968, and turns out to be more exciting than the second half, made in 1980, when the team had turned to the newer Hawk.

The first film follows a complete sortie, right from hangar roll-out to the final shutdown checks, whereas the second is composed in a far more impressionistic fashion, with a collage of manoeuvres compiled from more than one display. Comparisons are inevitable: the tiny Gnat with its slim fuselage and well proportioned wings is aesthetically more pleasing than the later, hump-backed Hawk. Moreover, on the strength of the evidence here at least, it performs better. Its rate of roll looks a lot faster than the Hawk's, a flick roll apparently taking less than one second to complete, and it can evidently perform high-speed man-ocuvres with greater case.

The high-speed crossover, in which two Gnats approach each other from opposite ends of the airfield and pass within inches, is still enough to give the most blase of observers serious palpitations. Is there any footage of the old Hawker Hunter Black Arrows team tucked away anywhere? The Spitfire and the Lanvideos are straightforward history lessons in the development of these two great aircraft, and the Spitfire film in particular is exemplary. It goes right back to designer R. J. Mitchell's early days at Supermarine in Southampton, and contains fascinating footage of the Supermarine S4 and S6 floatplane racers which woo the Schneider trophies in the late

If the Spitfire was an épec fencer, theo tha Lancaster was a beavyweight champion. An aircraft of prodigious strength, its four Merlins (the same engine as the Spitfire) could lift own weight in bombs; Barnes Wallis used them to drop his dam-husting bouncing bombs, and it was the only aircraft capable of carrying his 22,000lb "Grand Slam" earth-

These three tapes belong to a series called "Men of Destiny" made in the early 1960s by the American documentary pro-ducer Jack Le Vien. The dating is important, for ways of putting together film biographies have changed since then, end to watch two at least of these videos is to be transported back into an almost forgotten era. If someone today was making a television documentary about Winston Churchill it is unlikely the result would be much like The Finest Hours. Certainly, the newsreel film would still be there, and much of it is of absorbing interest: nostlagic to those who lived through the period and a vivid piece of archeeology to the younger generation, for whom Churchill is as remote as Bismarck or Napoleon. There would still be pretty shots of Blenheim and Chartwell; and there would have to be Churchill's own words, spoken here by the man and the caricatures of George himself and, in an admirable Grosz; and with no archive film pastiche of the famous growling available of the 1923 Munich voice, by the actor Patrick

The name of Louis Clyde Stoumen should be mentioned since he wrote and directed Black Fox, and the quality of the film, which won an Oscar for hest documentary feature, is due to him. Apart from exercising visual imagination, he produced a script of admirable clarity which succinctly analyses Hitler's background and political ideas. This cannot be the last word on a controversial and complex topic, but until video comes up with a belier one, it can be confidently "Renaissance Paintings m Manuscripts" exhibition at the Manuscripts Library in Pierpoint Morgan Library in New York recently, a dealer sidled up to Janet Backhouse, nue of the organizers, and said he had one of the lost minatures from the Sforza Hours, a fifteenth-century prayer book. Miss Backhouse said: "I was very excited. When he brought it in I could see it was indeed noe of the missing bits, but I wasa't sure if ha was selling it or keeping it for himself."

Finally he said he would give the British Library first refusal, and negotiations began. Still in its cracked glass case, therefore, this miniature can be seen at the Brtish Museum when the exhibition opens there Friday. Another late-comer to the sbow, which was first shown at the Getty Museum in Los. Angeles in 1981, is a picture which was vetoed for reasons of tact from the display by the Americans: "Spanish soldiers being roasted for lunch by Red Indians", as Miss Backhouse puts it. There will be about 50 items taken from 25 volumes and representing works from the centres of illumination in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries - France, Italy and Flanders. "All sorts of people who wander across the pages of your history books appear", says Miss Backhouse, "Charles the Bold, Charles V, Queen Isabella of Castille."

aspired to be, had little hope at the time of winning her. She was, in fact, married to another. Love was finally requited when, 10 years after her first spouse died, Margnerite agreed to marry him.

Sala's portrait, in half-profile, makes him look more youthful than he could have been when the picture was painted. He is seen with curly blond hair and a fresh com-plexion. Enlarged 16 times for the publicity posters, the thou-sands of delicate brush strokes by the artist Jean Perréal cause his skin to look veritably downy.

Further charming pretensions are shown in the early six-teenth-century "Genealogy of the Portuguese Infante Dom Fernando", brother of King Juhn III. It was intended, as Miss Backhouse says, "to show his connection with everybody in sight". Here, courtly figures in magnificent costumes look nut at you, or point with flamboyant gestures to their other relations on the family tree. This, like many of the works on show, remains unfinished: the family crests are blank.

There are no records of the techniques used. Miss Backhouse is sure that "they must have worked under magnifying glasses, it just could not have been done with the naked eye". The gaps in the genealogy have because with different artists employed for different tasks, they never got round to finishing

I like tha paca of Rea's career: slow and steady, forcing respect, sattling in for e long haul.

PEGGY LEE Wed, Hexagon Theatre, Reading: Fri, Congress Theatre, Eastbourne The lest time I sew her, aha did not sing her definitive version of "The Folks Who Live on the Hill", the most romantic song aver written. My advice is to kick and scream and rip out the thaatre seats until sha does. But, of course, she would sound wonderful elinging "Anarchy in tha UK", if ahe had to.

eccee The peace of ecces the first Olympic Games still survives at Olympia.

Standing on the wooded hill of Kronos, you look down on the ancient stadium. In this tranquil setting, it's easy to picture the athletes' entrance through the arched tunnel.

They came from all over the Greek world, pmtected by the Truce-Bearers of Zens. Thus, the Games fluurished from 786 B.C. for a thousand years, unsulfied by war, legal disputes or death penalties.

This is only one of the fascinating moments on a 1984 Swan Hellenic Cruise. But whether it's Jerusalem, Mycenae, Troy or Yalia and Trebizond on the Black Sea, each visit is more rewarding because we help you see it in context.

Your ship, Orpheus, sails every? weeks until Christmas, Fares from 1734 include most shore excursions, gratuities and insurance. For details phone Swan Hellenic Reservations on 01-247 7532 (15 St. Botolph St., London EC3A 7DN), or see your ABTA travel agent.

Superstar reveals hidden talent

Paul Newman is oow, astonish-ingly, oo the verge of 60 and has been among the most accomplished American screeo actors for almost three decades. Perhaps unfortunately, he has also been for that period an international superstar and sex symbol, attributes which have tended to obscure his considerable talent He has never woo an Oscar (though he is in good company io that) but, more importaotly, he has oever quite played a role that could justify promotion from being a very good octor to a great one. Similarly, although he has shown himself to be an extremely skilled director, the feeling remains that he could have become ao eveo better one if stardom and acting had not claimed much of his attention. With a oew film just opened in Londoo, Harry and Son (in which, for the first time, he is both director and star, as well as co-writer). Newman is the subject of an interesting season of nine films on BBC2, weekly from Thursday. It includes some of his lesser-known films and demonstrates a versatility not always opparent in his wellknown rofes. Also in the seasoo are two films directed by him. For opeoers, Newman plays one of his most commercially popular roles, Lew Harper in The Moving Target (BBC 2, Thurs, 9-10.55pm), mede in 1966. Based on Ross Macdonald's Los Angeles private eye Lew Archer, the character is well-suited to Newman's style, and he was to pfay him agaio in

The Drowning Pool.

A complicated search for e missing husband reveals murders with roots that lie deep in the guilt-ridden past of the Californian rich. Newman preys Harper with the frayed appeal of a cynical but still vulnerable man for whom there are few surprises left. Directed by Jack Smight, The Moving Target is a fast-moving, eojoyable thriller, but does oot provide a very taxing part for Newman.

Later on, the seasoo offers some of his earlier films, including two made in 1958, both with excellent directors at the beginning of their careers. Martin Ritt's The Long Hot Summer has Newman as the drifter who comes ioto William Faulkner's southern town and

Museum of London's inva-luable "Made io Loodoo" series, recalls one evening when a film buff marched past bim at the cioema exit, muttered "What about a Christine Nor-den seasoo?" through clenched teeth, and swept out ioto the Barbican concrete. How touching to find that torches still burn for the sireo of late 1940s films like Night Beat and Idol of Paris.

Yet the "Made to London" series - the present season is the seventh - regularly inspires patriotic passions and prods fond memories.

The programme is drawn from the National Film Archive's extensive and growing collection of viewable prints; familiar titles rub shoulders with films scarcely seeo sioce their initial exhibition. Last autumo, we wirnessed Buster Keaton's final starring feature. The Invader - totally disbevelled, but an important curio. This season we await (on July 5) the 1934 versioo of Vivian Ellis's charming musical Mister

Colin Sorensen, organizer of the Cinders, with the composer in ettendance.

All this enterprise takes money; since the sixth season (last autumn) sponsorship bas come from the Japanese finance house Nomura International. At first sight this may seem e bizarre, exotic source, but the British film industry's foreign connexions are many and tangled. Emigré arlists from Europe rowded the studios in the 1930s: the Twickenham production Broken Blossoms (May 31) offers a textbook case. This absorbing, atmospheric remake of D. W. Griffith's tearful of D. melodrama bears the stylish stamp of a Germao director Hollywood), a German cameraman (Curt Courant), a Polish-born composer (Karol Rathaus), and a German actress. Dolly Heas, cast with temerity as a trampled Cockney wail. The chief British participant - co-star and scriptwriter Williams - oaturally Emlyn plays a Chinaman.

Other films trumpet their figures.

Golden Boy steps back into the ring

Jeremy Flyon, who makes his debut at the National Theatre in Golden Boy by Clifford Odets oext week, has oot only been rehearsing for the part, but has been in rigorous training at the gym under the watchful eye of boxing manager Terry Lawless, Fraok Bruno's trainer. As Joe Bonaparte, he gives up bis promising career as a violinist to coocentrate on the fight husiness and challeoge for the world lightweight championship in a play which the author sobtitled "a modern allegory".

Golden Boy, opening oo Tuesday, is directed by Bill Bryden, who admits he bas always been a fight fan. "I find It a great attraction, and people heve written so well about it - Mailer and Hemingway for example." His love of boxing is one reason why Golden Boy was chosen wheo it was decided to revive one of Odet's plays. The most fruitful period of Odets's writing was in the 1930s, when he worked closely with the Groop Theatre in New York, which was set up in opposition tn the Broadway and promp Brando to say, "To me Odets is the thirties. Golden Boy is an epic play which scaled the success of the Group Theatre and Odets, and probably only a large company like the National coold attempt it. Their prodoction is the first revival of the play in this country since the Group Theatre brought the original production to London in 1938, the year after it opeoed in New York.

The play has been described as a definitive stage portrait of American urban life in the 1930s, which leaves the possibility that it is dated. Bill Bryden disagrees: "It is no more deted than classical plays. It is dated in that is smells of the depression of the 1930s, but it becomes history. We are trying to present the immediacy of the play, and it says something about the 1980s while it is set in tbe 1930s."

it reflects Odets's own dilemma, the choice between tryiog to be e real writer or to be rich, says Bryden. Odets chose riches and went to Hollywood. riches and went to Hollywood. beart ain't in fighting, your hate "Joe Bonaparte goes for success is", he says, which demon-

he has to pay."

He has to be played by a young actor with strength, power and innoceoce, and of course he has to make the audience believe he could be a boxer. Jeremy Flynn, aged 23, has oever boxed before, but with encouragement and cajolery from Terry Lawless he was transformed. After their first meeting Lawless commented, "He laces a boot OK and he's got them oo the right feet, and believe me that is an improvement oo some of them."

In Golden Boy, Bonaparte's trainer articulates the motive of the battle for survival. "Your

FINANCE AND INDUSTRY

Executive Editor Kenneth Fleet

Merger will strengthen Lazard fraternity firms in London, New York and Paris to join forces in a federal grouping which nonetheless preserves the independence of each, is eminently sensible. There may be reservations about the mechanics but conceptually, the move is hard to fault.

Prevented by mutual agreement from expanding into each other's territories, the Lazard banks have worked together when serving international clients. Lazard Brothers in Londoo has been managed separately from the other two - Paris and New York share a common senior partner in M. Michel David-Weill - and the potential for cooperation has not been fully exploited. The internationalization of financial markets suggested the point had come when the firms either had to go it alone developing internationally or con-

The solution arrived at, looks a good one for Lazard Brothers and its owners S. Pearson. Instead of a 79.4 per cent stake in the none-too-dynamic Lazard Brothers, S. Pearson ends up, in effect, with 50 per cent of the Londoo merchant bank and a 10 per cent share in the profits of both New York and Paris. Over time it also draws out £16m in preference dividends from Lazard Brothers. The profit and loss impact for Pearsoo is negligible, although it would have received £3.7m jostead of £2.6m in cash dividends last year had the

Over time. Pearson would probably be happy enough with the small book loss it incurs on the deal. The dynamic New Ynrk firm, Lazard Freres & Co raised profits from £36m to £55m in the year to September 1983 and in the ensuing six. months it has made about £40m. Admittedly, this is before the partners'. share of profits. Even so, Lazard Brothers, which employs 200 more staff at 600 and substantially more capital, made only £13.4m last year.

M David-Weill will head the partnership committee which will decide the strategic direction of the three firms and will also appoint the chairman of Lazard Brothers and the senior partner of the New York firm.

The emphasis of the structure is on developing cooperation rather than cootrol of any part of the grouping and in contrast to some of the recent mergers in the banking and securities iodustry, the emphasis will not be on capital hungry activities. The aim is not to provide all financial services to all people, rather the niche appraoch, advising and providing

Irony of the Reuters sell-off

Perhaps the most ironic message of the Reuters flotation so far is that it now may be time to sell shares in the newspaper publishing companies which stand to gaio most from the issue and fought so hard to realize their Reuters shares. At least that is the conclusion of Mr Conor Fahy of the stockbrokers Teather &Greenwood, who put his client into Fleet Holdings and Associated Newspapers more than a year ago, since wheo they have comfortably more than doubled in value on the Stock

The logic is inescapable. Iovestors big or small who want ao interest iothe dynamic growth of Reuters' business informatioo services will be able to buy it direct after June 4. The value of the Reuters shares held by newspaper companies is now fully known and, somewhat smaller than thought a few months ago; especially if the effectively non-tradable "A" shares, which would yield less than 2 per cent dividend income at the minimum issue price, are removed from the

وكذا من إنعل

Fleet Holdings, now 161p, might be worth 100p without the Reuter stake, as the market suggests, and Associated at 475p, might be worth more than 300p shorn of Reuters. Advertising revenue is rising strongly, costs have been controlled and some group managements are gradually coming to grips with new technologies that make expansion feasible again.

But the steam has already run out of newspaper shares and there is a good old rule among stock market professionals that you should never invent a new reason for holding a share when the old one runs

An exception could be Fleet Holdings, strooger than others this week, because of the quiescent presence of Mr Robert Holmes à Court and his piratical stake in the company. This might be a reason why Lord Matthews, io the forefront of the battle to unlock the Reuters, shares, has been advised to keep a high proportion of Fleet's "B" shares at least until 1986 rather than sell today and leave the company sitting on £55m of tempting

Meanwhile, first indications are that Reuters' shares will be well-received to New York, despite receot disenchantment with electrooic information stocks. The stockbrokers Gazeoove and Hoare Govett are marketing the shares with gusto in London too. There should be little difficulty in striking a price of around £2 a share against the minimum teoder price of 180p, though it is still too early to tell if investors will have to bid more to be sure of an allocation.

Statistical support for optimists

The excess of starts over bankruptcies and liquidations has riseo remarkably. In 1980 the total was just 16,099. The following year it doubled and while thefigure fellback to 23,117 in 1982, it bounded to 47,165 last year.

The biggest gains over the four years were in construction, where there were 30,764 more starts than stops, the vast majority in the £1,000 to £49,000 a year turnover categoty, and in "other services" where there was a net gain of 29,954. Production industries had a net gain of nearly 15,000 and more than 12,000 were oviding in finance, property and professional services. Retailing was the sole sector in the four years to record a dip.

Some apparently firm evideoce emerged yesterday to confirm the Government's Employment pointed out fresh belief that industry and commerce are thriving uoder Conservative rule. New statistics suggest that in the past four years business starts exceeded business stops by an impressive 120,000. The figures also show that far from being converted into a nation of small shopkeepers and computer software salesman, Britain is seeing the arrival of new enterprises across a broad spectrum, ranging from agriculture and spectrum, ranging from agriculture and wholesaliog to catering and financial services.

The calculations have been made by Mr Pom Ganguly, statistician at the Department of Trade and Industry's small firms divisioo, who has broadcoed the base which produced the old company birth and death figures by including all VAT registratioos and deregistratioos. By showing each start and stop within turnover bands, he claims a more comprehensive view is possible of the structural changes taking place io smaller firms in an attempt to curb the growing resistance to 20 years to roll over and die many of the changes proposed for the Stock Exchange's trading structure in the recent discussion document.

In a series of lunches and private talks, the Bank has set out to "explain the commerical facts of life" to the brokers most likely to water down the favoured options within the Exchange's Green Paper, particularly the widely held view that single capacity would disappear as a consequence of the abolition of minimum official circles.

A Bank official conceded the emotion behind the smaller brokers' fears but suggested that many had not adequately researched the situation to see where their future lay within the new structures.

The growing resistance to the proposals, which are the key to the wider changes in Britain's financial services, is causing

Mr Lewis said that since that meeting they had identified three of the leading jobbers that had attended as observers, including Smith Brothers, and have entered "discussions with them with a view to determining whether single capacity

Mr Lewis added that even Sir Nicholas Goodison, the Exchange chairman, was in favour of single capacity but that the jobbers did not feel that they could compete with brokers as market makers.

"There is that old prejudice that brokers think jobbers make too much money and jobbers think hrokers have it far too cushy. We hope to break through that and establish the reality of the situation," Mr Lewis said.

The smaller firms hope to formulate a system where single capacity can be maintained for secondary stocks, leaving blue chip husiiness to the big firms and their institutional clients.

Peck and Wearwell, yesterday unvoiled a £53.4m merger plan on inflation for the two companies, but stunned the City by postponing By Peter Wilson-Smith the promised three-way deal to include his third stock market

Disappointing inflation figures for April rounded off a week of gloomy economic statistics for the Government Retail prices increased by 1.3 per cent over the previous month pushing the prices index to 349.7 and leaving the yearon-year inflation rate unchanged at 5.2 per cent.

The size of the monthly increase came as a disappointment in the City where many analysts had been predicting a fall in the annual rate to below 5 per cent and also confounded earlier Government optimism.

However, Mr Tom King, Secretary of State for Employ-ment, said the Government was still "on course to get inflation down to 4 1/2 per cent by the end of the year."
Much of the April increase in prices was caused by duty increases in the Budget on alcohol and tobacco. Officials said that Budget increases had worked through to prices more quickly this year than last and were responsible for about onethird of the April rise in the index.

The strength spending in shops is believed to have encouraged retailers to pass on the Budget rises more quickly to customers.

Increased local authority rents, rates and water charges, which usually fall in April, also pushed up the ludex last month and seasonal food prices were also higher. The Department of

The recent cot in mortgage rate from 11.25 to 10.25 per cent was one offsetting factor and there should be further impact of this

Officials are confident that the underlying rate of inflation has not picked op and prices are only rising at about 0.3 to 0.4 per cent a month, excluding special factors.

However, this view is not shared by everyone in the City. Phillips & Drew, the brokers, for instance, believes there has been some acceleration in the underlying rate and is forecasting inflation of 5 1/4 per cent by the end of this year.

Computer breakdown hits trading

A computer breakdown severely restricted trading in the City's two latest contracts yesterday, both based on the new FT-SE 100 share index. The interruption in the Topie TV service, which lasted for 75

Money supply for the week ended May 7 jumped by nearly $5 billion compared with forecasts of $3 billion, and broadly validated the cynical market view that the US seasonal adjustment factors are incapable of coping with America's personal tax payment season in April.

Demand for credit is still booming in virtually every sector of the economy. Since the beginning of the year, for example, shore-term borrowing by industry has risen by $36.5 billion, compared with a repayment of $400m for the comparable 1983 period. In the week to May, personal expenditure loans rose by $633m (1983:$82m), and the sector's credit demand has increased by

Nevertheless, a feeling is growing among London brok-ers that Wall Street looks good value for long-term investors. Grieveson Grant, for example, is carefully identifying a bespoke buying list, which includes companies with good earnings growth potential, and which are not overvalued. Philip Morris and McDonalds fit this buy. Good cash flows are also essentital to survive a credit squeeze. The turnround at Massey-Ferguson Holdings, the British arm of the Canadian group, appears to be gathering pace, at ast in profit terms. There has been talk in the past of a public issue of preferred shares in Britain. The Government's stake in Massey-Ferguson is in this category which is convertible into shares in the Canadian parent. For the time being however, such an issue will probably remain no more than a talking point.

SECURE A MONTHLY INCOME WITH GROWTH PROSPECTS

- * Equal income payments each month for a year
- * Income payments reviewed annually with excellent potential for increases
- * Initial gross yield 7.79%
- * Long-term capital growth prospects

With a building society account you have very little scope for income growth. And no chance of capital growth.

By contrast, the Save & Prosper Monthly Income Portfolio allows you to enjoy the comfort of equal monthly payments for 12 months and still benefit from income growth and long-term

Level monthly income

The Portfolio invests in 5 Save & Prosper income-oriented unit trusts and provides equal monthly income payments—so helpful when budgeting for your outgoings.

At the outset, the level of gross monthly income is fixed for the first year. If you had invested £5,000 on 16th May 1984, you would receive £23.00 per month (made up of unit trust distributions paid net and bank deposit interest currently paid gross).

Income growth potential The table below shows projected monthly income payments on £5,000 invested on 16th May 1984, assuming 5% annual growth and current taxation.

July 1984	£23.00
July 1989	£29.35
July 1994	£37.46

On this basis the income from your Portfolio would surpass the current normal building society ordinary share account return in just four years. Obviously, if building society rates fall this could happen sooner and vice

The Second Guinness Mahon Business Expansion Fund -with the professional management that makes the difference.

A fund approved by the Inland Revenue under the terms of the Finance Act 1983, giving income tax relief for eligible investors against the cost of shares in unquoted U.K. companies.

have identified business expansion funds as one of the most outstanding tax planning opportunities now available for U.K. residents. Money invested by the fund in qualifying companies attracts relief at the investor's highest rate of income tax. For instance, a 50% income taxpayer should receive a rebate of £2,500 on an investment of £5,000. Last year Guinness Mahon was the first merchant bank to launch a fund under the new Business Expansion Scheme legislation. This fund has already invested in eight companies in a wide variety of industries. Following this, Guinness Mahon raised funds for two other Venture Capital projects - one for private individuals, the other for sophisticated institutional investors.

As a leading merchant Bank, Guinness Mahon has been involved for many years in the financing of small companies. Private investors can now take advantage of this experience.

THE BENEFITS

Full tax relief at the highest rate-up to £40,000 for qualifying U.K. investors.

2 Professional management – Guinness Mahon has specialists in developing the potential of emerging companies.

3 Prospect of ground-floor investment in major companies of the 1990s.

It should be noted that there are high risks involved in investment in young companies as well as the prospect of high rewards.

Leading financial journalists and advisers Guinness Mahon aims to minimise these risks by investing in a diversified portfolio of companies.

UK missing out on big Soviet contracts

By John Lawless

Next week's Anglo-Soviet trade talks in Moscow are expected to end with the announcemet of three contracts for British companies. However, the small size of the contracts will underline the state of business between the two countries.

One British trade specialist gaid yesterday: "There is not much political capital to be got out of doing big business with Britain at the moment, "if these were French or German talks, there would be lots of big deals being announced

The prize that Britain would most like to carry away from the three days of talks - being headed for Britain by Mr Paul Channon, the Minister for Trade - would be an order for Davy McKee for the Tenghiiz oil and gas separation plant about £150m. However, it is thought likely to meet the keenest possible competition from both French and West German plant contractors.

The contracts which Britain is expected to win are for friction welding equipment for NEI Thompson of Wolverhampton, worth between £1m and 13m; a similar sized order for a John Brown subsidiary for automation cootrol machinery, after two others in the past year and an order for a rotor blade foundry for the Siberian gas pipeline for Weir Westgarth of Wokingham, Berkshire.

Morgan Grenfell, which expects to put £15m line of credit in place for the Soviet Foreign Trade Bank next month, after two for £25m in the past 18 months, said vesterday: "We are encouraged by the volume of business in the film to £5m range, but disappointed in the apparent lack of larger contracts.

The biggest deal it has financed under its recent credit lines has been for a £11m margarine packing plant,

Futures trading volume million contracts

CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE

Dealings in American Treasury Bond futures are due to start on the fledgling London Inter-national Financial Futures Exchange next month.

It will be the first time a contract traded on the world's biggest futures market, the Chicago Board of Trade, bas achieved an overseas presence and demonstrates the growing internationalism of the highly sophisticated but rough and tumble futures business.

The CBOT is delighted of course that its T-Bond contract is to make its London debut. Jetung in to witness the start of trading will be Mr. Thomas P. Cunningham, junior, the larger than life chairman of the Chicago exchange. A lawyer turned futures trader, Mr. Cunningham, aged 46, will bring with bim at least one controversial idea to exercise the collective minds of the men

As the City condinues to proclaim its dedication to selfregulation, be suggests that Liffe would benefit from a little more government interference.

The Commodity Futures Trading Committee is the official watchdog with which the Board of Trade, and its neighbouring and rival ex-change, the Chicago Mercantile, have to contend.

CBOT men admit in private conversations that the committee is a nuisance.' Future traders nimble footed and with a quick-buck mentality, are often ill at ease with the cautious requirements government paid officials.

trading. He is rarely on the floor

Anyway, it is becoming increasingly a young man's game. The average age of dealers is falling rapidly. In the mainly agricultural days before the advent of financial futures. the average age was 55 years. Now, on the financial side alone, the average is around 25. It is, of course, on the financial pitch that the CBOT is making its international thrust. After the T-Bond in London, the CBOT and Liffe could develop their relationship even further when trading on the new FTSE 100 Index starts in Chicago. Both sides agree that "footsie" contracts, which started on this month, would be a welcome addition to the extensive Chicago range. But a lot of problems have to be ironed out; a lot of authorities convinced.

It looks like being a year at least before "footsie" arrives in Chicago where the problems of the Continental Illinios Bank have caused ripples unease aniong the Chicago dealers.

Continental is their major banker and it was the clearing arm of the CBOT which withdrew $50m during the height of the panic rumours about the bank's future.

At the CBOT it is estimated that the Continental accounts for 65 per cent of bank business. But few individual traders, it is claimed, switched accounts as the rumours of a banking crisis

Nevertheless, it will be surprising if the traders, experts in carrying out hedging deals on the trading floors, do not move to lessen their deep involvement with the Continental during the 30-day life of the record $4.5bn rescue package.

A disaster at the Continental could bring havoc to the Chicago exchanges and choke off the futures boom which is going to get more involved in shares (witness the footsie move and plans to draw various United States stock indices) before it has bit the Dallas style millionaire's road.

an income payment on the 15th day of Annual Yield of the Britannia Monthly Income Portfolio was 8.09%. 3. Income Stability: Unlike Building Society deposits, the income from the Portfolio is not at the mercy of downward movements in interest

4. Income Growth: The equity content of the Portfolio offers good prospects for income growth.

5. Capital Growth: The prospects are good not only from the equity content, but also from the fixed interest content, which should rise in value as interest rates fall.

6. Trustee Protection: All investments held in the Britannia Monthly Income Portfolio are unit trusts authorised by the Department of Trade and held for the benefit of investors by the Trustees, Midland Bank Trust Company Limited, or National Westminster Bank PLC.

7. Easy Access: Your investment may be realised at the bid prices ruling on any business day. You will normally receive a cheque within seven days of receipt of your renounced certificate/s by the Managers. How your Investment Works

The money you invest is divided into five equal parts, each of which is then invested in a different Britannia unit trust. The balance has been carefully planned to give a good spread between fixed interest and equity holdings. This means there is a good degree of capital protection plus real prospects for long-term growth of both income and capital. This is how the Portfolio is divided.

The union says that it knows of about 300 cases a year of parents unfairly relegating their children to minimum grant status, and it believes many more never come to its notice.

The union sees the reduction in the minimum grant as ominous. Miss Veal says: "We are concerned that the cut represents a move towards abolishing the minimum grant altogether and that eventually some parents will be expected to contribute towards tuition fees". The Committee of Vice Chancellors and Principals of UK Universities endorses the fears: "We regard the reduction as a retrograde step: we were looking for an increase in the minimum grant this year. It is an important indicator of the Government's willingness to contribute to the education of all students".

The Department of Education and Science said last week that there was no indi-cation that the balving of the minimum grant was part of a deliberate policy to shelve it altogether oext year. But Sir Keith Joseph, Education Secretary, has advocated the abolition of the minimum grant io the past. And with the Government's main focus on educational reform rather than students' maintenance, the demise of the minimum grant seems imminent.

FAMILY MONEY

Fashionable life

Canada Life, the life insurance and pensions company, has taken a step towards becoming that fashionable institution — a financial supermarket. It has formed links with other companies which can provide general insurance, banking and corporate financial advice and more links are planned.

Canada Life decided that buying ventures specializing in these fields was unnecessarily expensive. But it wanted to widen the services that its 400 salesmen could offer.

Now Canada Life can contact Stawart who Careaa Life can confact Stewart Wrightson, a large firm of international brokers, quoted on the London Stock Exchange, for insurance, the Bank of Scotland for loans and a money market cheque account, Brown Goldie for corporate finance and Yorkshire Friendly Scotland for its account. Ready money Mortgage money is available at the Chettenham and Gloucester Building Society. The managing director, Mr Andrew Longhurst, said: "We have no Andrew Longhurst, sald: "We have no mortgage queues and are happy to help as many prospective borrowers as possible, including non-members." Like most building societies, the C and G does, however, charge extra for larger loans — 0.5 per cent more between 215,001 and 220,000, 1 per cent extra between 220,001 and 230,000, 1.5 per cent on loans between 230,001 and cent on loans between £30,001 and £40,000, negotiable over £40,000.

Flexi-account

Bradford & Bingley Building Society's new savings account, called Flexible Savings Account, gives investors much greater freedom than other similar building society schemes. The main features include the ability to save up to 2200 per month, either in one amount or several and the flexibility to vary subscriptions or even miss out. There is no fixed term to the account, apart from a maximum limit of £30,000.

The account pays the ordinary rate of interest, now 6.25 per cent, plus a yearly bonus of 1 per cent if no withdrawais are made during the year or Y2 per cent if two withdrawais are made. More than two withdrawais cancels out the bonus.

Cover in US

Following a campaign pioneered in these columns after the Atkinson family's motoring tragedy, the Association of British Travel Agents has produced an uninsured motorists' policy to protect holidaymakers who drive in the United States.

In Britain, motorists are required to have unlimited third party liebility cover, but in the US, each state has its own rules end, in some, minimum covar is as low as $20,000 (about £14,000). Most Americans take out uninsured motorists' insurance to cover them if they are insurance to cover them if they are injured by an uninsured driver or injured by an uninsured driver or someone with only the state minimum cover. This insurance has not, until now, been availeble to visiting motorists.

The ABTA policy, Topsure, gives visitors to the States top-up excess liability cover of $1m (ebout £700,000) or $2m, plus top-up third party liability (to cover you if you injure someone else) and personal accident cover. The cost is £20 for 14 deys cover of $1m or £27.50 for $2m. Holideymekers should epply at laast 10 deys before deperture. Details from your ABTA travel egent. from your ABTA travel egent.

Youngsters win a head start

Mending grandfather clocks, making jigsaws, silkscreen printing taxidermy, landscape gardening and TV end audio repairs - these are some the business ideas put forward by 13 young people in Notting-hamshire who now have the chance to put their projects into practice runoing their own ousinesses.

The youngsters are the winners of the Nottinghamshire's Head Start in Business competition, run by the Industriel Society with Nottinghamshire County Council and sponsored by Abbey National Building Society.

Mr Malcolm Miller, of the Abbey National commented:
This is the first time we have run the Head Start scheme outside London. I believe one of the most important ways of tackling the problem of youth unemployment is to encourage them to develop a spirit of enterprise".

Cut your monthly repayments down to size with a single simple loan.

Many of our customers have found that paying a number of separate monthly repayments costs them dearly because some items carry higher interest charges than others and some have repayment periods too short for comfort.

Whereas, as a homeowner, you could probably cover all your regular monthly commitments - H.P., short term loans, even Credit Card and Budget accounts - with one, much lower monthly repayment. With a Charterloan Secured Personal Loan from Chartered Trust, part of Standard Chartered Bank which is Britain's largest independent international bank, with assets exceeding £28 billion.

Remember, your special status as a homeowner means we are able to charge substantially less than for an unsecured loan (current A.P.R. 26.8%).

You may wish to use your Charterloan for another reason. A new kitcheo? Holiday of a lifetime? Major household purchase? Changing the car? Central heating? You name it! With 3-10 years to repay £600-£15,000 (depending on the purpose of the loan), monthly repayments can be so much more manageable, as the table shows. Tax relief can cut your monthly repayments even further if the whole loan is used for home improvements.

Fate is about to abandon Watford on their predestined final path

Everton will win the FA Cup this afternoon. The book of omens says so. They are the third successive class of pupils to learn a lesson from Liverpool in March and finish the term by returning to Wembley,

The previous two Milk Cup runners-up, Tottenham Hot-spur and Manchester United, passed the second examination.

Everton are also the third successive finalists to take on opponents who are without their leader. Watford's Rostron being the latest victim of an unnecessarily cruel rule that should be changed immediately. The previous two suspended captains, Roeder of Queens Park Rangers and Foster of Brighton, ended up with losers;

But Watford are a law unto themselves. Accustomed to rewriting history since they climbed out of the fourth division as champions a mere six years ago, there seemed only one logical place for them to go this season, once any cham-pionship ambitions they might have held had been almost immediately cut short by injuries.

Watford's manager thought so, too. As Elton John was preparing for a world tour before Christmas, Graham Taylor advised his chairman to keep May 19 free. His convictions remained unbroken even when, in their opening tie a couple of weeks later, his side were two down within half an clubs started to emerge from their respective troubles. Both of their Wembley dreams were cocooned inside Molineux. Wattord, lying twentieth won 5-0 there on December 3 and Everton, then sixteenth, lost 3-0 there on December 27. Both subsequently rose nine places and, had they shown such form from the start, they would have already opened a door to Europe through the UEFA cup.

So similar was their improvement that it was no surprise that they should share a point as well as eight goals in their. February League fixture. The central defensive pairing of Tatcliffe and Monntfield was the key for Howard Kendall For Taylor, it was the striking partnership of Reilly and Johnston between the two attitudes. Everton, relatively secure at the back, have been unlocked only once, by Chiedozie of Nts County in their seven ties. Watford, stretching their wines in attack, have scored 15 goals in their six malches. A new version of the old saying, the immovable object meeting the irresistible force.

In Barnes, once described by Zico as "the future of English football," and Callaghan, a possible tourist to South America next nomth, Watford are armed with potentially the best suppliers of ammunition in the country. Their individual contests against Stevens and Bailey, Everton's vulnerable full backs, will be the most decisive factors in the overall equation.

Everton, whose goalkeeper is by far the more reliable, will be content to await mistakes that are almost sure to be found amid a remarkebly inexperi-enced rearguard that is so youthful that Watford's average a sense, they have already won.

Reid will be the leading figure in Everion's approach, which by comparison will seem so gentle as to be almost static, so cautious as to be almost hidden underground. Watford will, as usual, waste no time in bouncing their less sophisti-cated but substantially effective ideas off the forehead of Reilly and the feet of Johnston.

Even though they carry the avy expectations of their supporters and the hurden of being slight favourites, Everton should be the more composed, perhaps crucially so. Their defeat by their Merseyside neighbours two months ago was a convenient dress rehearsal and, having suffered only five other defeats this year, their confidence reaches as high as

Watford, who looked far from relaxed in their narrow victory over Plymouth Argyle in the semi-final, are playing in front of the eyes of the world for first time. During the opening moments on the famous stage, their nerves will rattle like loose change. Unless they control them, it could be

The sad truth is that because of the tight organization of the premier division the teams know each other though exciting and often dramatic, have been noted more for tough marking and petty feuding than for marking and petty leading man for scintillating football.

It must not be forgotten that while Celtic, the country's most renowned cup fighters have played in 41 finals and won the trophy 26 times, may have more incentive to win.

Aberdeen want to make history for the third by winning the cup for the third successive year, a feat matched only once this century by Rangers in the thirties and by becoming the first cfub outside the old firm of Celtic and Rangers to complete a League and Scotush Cup double.

The form guide declares that lease of life since his Aberdeen have the best defence in the country while that department has been Celtie's Achilles beel, the parkhead team having conceded twice as many goals as their oppopents. However, Celtic have through the years emphasised the attacking aspect of football and urged on by their legions of ecstatic supporters, they may set up many an electrifying early assault to score the vital opening goal.

That could be enough to win the game and eosure Celtie's cupboard does not lie bare this summer.

in fact, that any Games would be better without the superpower rivalry, whether veiled or event of bothe the Soviet Unin and the United States.

Some members of the IOC executive board, whom it would be invidious to name in the midst of the present controversy, consider that the Soviet bloc will find, like the Americans and West Germans in 1980, and the Africans in 1976, that they have lost more than they have gained. The chairman of one of the specialist commissions says: "It is a tragedy for the individual competitors who will be absent, but the Games will be undamaged. The does not destroy the ethics of the Clames." Voluntary involvement is, after all, supposed to be more important than the race for medals.

Three factors have become apparent, the most predictable of which is a determination after Seoul in 1488 to award the Games to specifically neutral hosts who wield no potentially inflammatory power or political axe. Of the leading candidate for 1992 – Barcelona. Stockholm, Parts, Nice and New Dellii - the most obvious would now be Stockholm, Vitaly Smirnoy, the Soviet IOC member, agrees with this principle, though it would seem that any country on the east-west, communist-capitalist alignment becomes, almost by definition, incligible, as de most unstable Third

Second, the more hard-headed leaders realize the need to find some kind of sanction against countries who engage in boycotts; but attempting to include such disci-pline within the Charter is almost more of a headache than the poycotts themselves.

Lastly, the Soviet action is bound to influence today's decision by FIFA in Zurich on who hosis the 1990 World Cup - for which, following the withdrawal of Eng-land, West Germany and Greece, the only rivals to Italy are the Soviet Linson. The probable inclusion of West Germany to replace Czechoslovalia in the Olympie football finals is sure to produce an eligibility row over Bundesliga professionals, similar to the ice

RACING: CIRCUS PLUME'S VICTORY THROWS OAKS INTO CONFUSION

Waiting on the word of Piggott By John Karter

المكذا من لايمنل

Keke Rosberg tried a new suspension lay-out on his Williams-Honda, but was unimpressed and will revert to the earlier suspension for the remaining qualification run. "Better the devil you know", was his wry comment afterwards. In contrast, suspension charges greatly. agrancing years, the of reference and a "damp squib" of a start to the season by his standards, Lester Piggott is still the man on whose very word and move the racing world hangs – especially when it comes to contrast, suspension changes greatly aided Manfred Winkelhock, whose ATS-BMW is becoming consistently A15-BMW is becoming consistently competitive. Softer from and harder rear springs helped in make him fastest of all for several minutes.

The BMW engine failures at Imola have been traced to a faulty batch of diaphragms in the boost system and all engines have since the classics.

Most jockeys would surely have been only too delighted to accept the Oaks ride on Circus Plume, who is now among the favourites for Epson, there and then. However, Piggott, being the man he is, merely "expressed interest" and told Dunlop that he had not really had a chance to look at the race yet.

When he does, Piggott will find a decidedly confused picture and nne that saw bookmakers' representatives looking unusually worried as they scurried around to try and form a market on the classic. nenis. The Brabham team still have their problems, however, and a persistent misfire kept Teo Fabi idle until the closing minntes of qualifying, when his oumber was hastily applied to Nelson Piquet's car for him to secure his place in the market on the classic.

So far, Ferrari have proved to be two seconds off the pace, hut aignificantly, they seem to have been in less turmoil than any of the other top teams. It may well be Italian as much as German horsepower, therefore, that Renault will have to beat tomorrow if they are to maintain their impressive record of success in France's premier motor race. The favourite in most lists now, at round 5-t, is Optimistic Lass, the vinner of Tuesday's Musidora Stakes at York. However, anyone who backs her should ensure their there is a "with a run" contingency struched to the bet, because he owner, Shaikh Mohammed, also has Kanz the former favourite, whn finished last yesterday in the Oaks, and his brother, Maktoum Al

Face Facts (nap) ran exceptionally will in his first race of the seasonat Newmarket a formight ago, when runner-up to Baynoun, who went on to win his next race very easily indeed at York. Sackford is my idea of the likely winner, now that sufficient rain has fallen in the area to guarantee good ground. That rain would have been like manna from heaven for Sackford, who impressed so much last season when he won the Easter Stakes at Kempton in the spring, and again in Septemeber when he won the Queen Elizabeth 11 Stakes at Ascot.

On the other hand, Trojan Fen, the only three-year-old in the field, would have been happier if the rain had stayed away, because he loves in hear his feet rattle, Members of his age group have a poor record in the race, with only two victories in the last 20 years to their credit. Trojan Feo is reverting to a mile after hlataotly failing to stay 10 furlongs in the Guardian Classic Trial at Sandown. No one should know better than Lester Piggott how best Trojan Fen can be beaten, because he has ridden him in all his races so far. He is not on him today, of course, because he cannot do the

At his best, though, Sackford should be an marvellous spare ride, especially as be finished four lengths in front of the Waterford Crystal Mile winner, Mpotekio, at Ascot, Wassl won the Irish 2,000 Guineas last year as well as the Greenham Stakes over the last seven furlongs of today's course. But he is likely to find the concession of 2th to my selection difficult.

Over a mile Sackford should hae too much pace for last year's Champion Stakes heroine, Compr-ant Wood, who will also be having her first race of the season.

Piggott will also be faceying his chances of winning the Aston Park

Unbeaten Secreto has strong claims

From Our Irish Correspondent, Dublin

Pat Eddery, whose most recent visit to Ireland yielded four good priced winners at the Phoenix Park on Wednesday night will not make his final choice for this afternoon's Airlie/Coolmore Irish 2,000 Guneas, until he has inspected the state of the ground at the Curragh.
His choice rests between Sadler's

Wells and Capture Him, both of whom won last time out, but gained few friends in the process.

Sadler's Wells, disliking the firm ground, struggled home a narrow winner of the Derrinstown Stud Derby Trial, while Capture Him did not appear to have a great deal in hand when landing the odds at the Phoenix Park, last Saturday, in a four-runner field.

A great deal of watering has been carried out at the Currach this week, which leads me to believe that he will choose Sadler's Wells, who sustained the sole defeat of his distinguished stable companion El Oran Senor.

David O'Brien believes that he can topple both his father's cotts with his unbeaten Secreto. As yet the tended. Secreto won the Tetrarch Stakes here last month, hy an extending margin, and David O'Brien thinks that not merely will he win today, but that he will turn

Teachers pick 224 schools for strike

Meanwhile, the teachers' unions have given a lukewarm response to the announcement that employers' leaders are to meet next week for the first time since the industrial action in schools started.

Mrs Nicbole Harrison, wbo chairs the Lahour-controlled Association of Metropolitan Authorities education committee, is meeting Mr Philip Merridale, leader of the management side during the pay negotiations, on Monday, to discuss whether they could call a full meeting of the manage-ment side to discuss we ye cut of the dispute.

Mrs Harrison said that an option might be to ask the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service to intervene. Mr Merrivale has said vene. Mr Merrivale has said that he would not rule out a move to try to hring the two sides together again.

However, since he has rejected independent arbitration, which the technique favour than which the teachers favour, they believe the initiative is unlikely to hreak the deadlock.

Circuses in plenty

If one could personify Warsaw, if some genie could give it human form, it would probably emerge as a greying, carpet-slippered paterfamilias almost immobilized by middle-aged spread. In the past he suffered and even past he suffered and even nowadays his joints creak painfully: life is fed by memories of glory, and cheaper visions, recreated from black-market copies of National Geographic, of distant, more prosperous lands.

But even genies can get it wrong. Over the last few wrone. Over the last few months Warsaw has seemed positively frivolous. Western stars fly in dazzle, and retreat; feasts and fetes are the order of the day. What are they all doing here, the minor rock groups, the country and western singers in their rodeo boots, Elton John, Stevie Wonder, Miles Davis, Yehudi Menuhin, Miss World and the formidable Mrs Julia Morley? Take away the smog, the Olympics and the Cadillacs and Warsaw would be a kind of Marxist Los Angeles, the show business capital of the communist block.

One theory is that the authorities are pursuing, in the manner of Roman emperors, a policy of bread and circuses, diverting the masses with full stomachs and plenty of entermainment

The theory, however, does not hold water. First, the food is not there and secondly, the Government has periodic bouts of criticizing the fickleness of youth, the pernicious-ness of Western popular culture. Occasionally a directive is issued banning Western music from the radio, or an episode of a Western series is dropped from the television screens and a worthy Czechoslovak film is substituted.

The real reason seems to be that parts of the economy are becoming genuinely responsive to maket demands. After a few years of newspaper babble about economic reform, of giving initiative to entrepreneurs and managers, some changes in the bureaucratic philosophy have emerged.

Impresarios are more or less free to persuade Western artistes to come to Poland, providing thay can guarantee payment, a reasonable profit 100 that they can steer their performers away from politics.

but little bread Certainly the demand for Western entertainment is as strong as ever witness the video boom in Poland and video boom in Poland and throughout the Eastern block. In the garden of you have a peer house, cut room or conservatory, it is time now to fill hanging baskets or movable tubs or window boxes with summer flowers. Keep them indoors for another couple of weeks so that they can get rooted in the new compost and do not put them outside until the weather really warms up - the end of the month in the south, the end of the first week of June in the north.

Strawberries are starting to flower now. Keep the buds her from woods and the ground really moist so that warmth in the ground can rise easily to ward off frosts that could blacken the flowers. Alternately, cover some of the plants with cloches. Sow runner beans, marrows and sween corn in peat pots in a greenhouse or frame, or sow them under cloches in the open. under cloches in the open.

In districts where there are large bird populations, protect lettuces and pea seedlings with some kind of netting. Sparrows and pigeons can cause enormous damage. Slugs, too, are on the prowl; watch for their slimy tell-tale trails and put down slug bait or water on a liquid slug killer.
